Greetings to all,

Please excuse this hand written letter. Crystal couldn't be here to type it on letterhead, but I felt like we needed to get this months issue of The Minuteman magazine out on time.

By the time you receive this issue the election, or rather "selection" process will be over. Only God Himself knows the consequences of the outcome! I am writing this letter on Oct. 31st with much concern and apprehension in my heart for the futures of our children and grandchildren. The world is in turmoil just as Christ told us in Matthew chapter twenty four and Luke twenty four. America is literally unravelling day by day. Each day we witness ever increasing decadence and insanity on every front!
sin causes insanity! (Deut. 28:28)

This statement of FACT may not be what most people want to hear, but it is still historical and Biblical truth! No man, political Party or courts will reverse the Judgment that has been pronounced on America! II Kings 24: 4 settles this matter. The shedding of at least 60,000,000 murdered, innocent children's blood has sealed our fate as a nation! (ps. 9:17)

In closing I am going to try to impress on all you read this letter the extreme importance of asking for a DVD or CD copy of the lesson we taught titled, "America in Prophecy"! you cannot and will not understand prophecy until you have the knowledge of who we are and how many other nations are mentioned in the scriptures and identified in prophecy. The future of America is written in Eze. chapters 37 and 39. This is proven beyond any shadow of a doubt in America in Prophecy. If you sincerely want Biblical truth call and get this teaching!

We love you in Christ,

In Christ's service,

Pastor Bittel Paugh

As I write this message, I feel obligated to put a “time stamp” on it because things are happening so quickly now. So, for your reference, this is being written in early October, 2024. The presidential election is just a little more than a month away now. By the time you read or hear this, it will be less than a month away.

And as I compile this message, the words of Barry McGuire’s 1965 song echo in my mind and I can’t help but feel this really is the time he sang about way back then, because today, we really are “on the eve of destruction.” Many have waited so long for this upcoming date: November 5, 2024... for an end to the Communist Regime in power in our nation, for an end to the deliberate destruction of our country, an end to the demoniacs “building back better,” “unburdened by what has been,” after tearing down all that we’ve built. An end to the weaponization of our judicial system, the tyranny endured by good, patriotic and Godly men and women and an opportunity for justice to return to America.

And what have we learned over these past four years? Oh, so much. First of all, we’ve all learned we’re definitely not better off today than we were four years ago. We’ve also learned just how deep, wide and real the “Deep State” really is and that there’s no longer any aspect of our federal government that can be trusted by the people. We’ve learned the Democrats are absolute, total evil demons and the Republicans are their controlled opposition. As I’ve said before, I no longer refer to Democrats and Republicans. They’re best described as Communists and Politicians, two wings of the same foul bird.

We also learned, over the past four years, just how quickly the Deep State can implement complete global control. Let me remind you. It was Friday, March 13, 2020 that Fauci and Company went on the national airwaves and declared “just two weeks to flatten the curve.” That afternoon, panic set in and stores were quickly sold out of (of all things) toilet paper. By Monday, the 16th, our nation was in full lockdown. Businesses deemed “non-essential” were forbidden to open. Masks became mandatory. People were ordered to stay in their homes. Even churches were ordered to remain closed, while liquor stores and marijuana dispensaries were deemed “essential.”

It all happened so fast. And immediately, I mean within days of the COVID declaration, those “essential” businesses that remained open already had plexiglass in place, signs and stickers had been designed, printed and distributed nationwide to every open public place with the number “6” on them. We had “6” on the floors, “6” on the doors, “6” at every store checkout, arbitrarily ordering the population to remain 6’ apart. And designer masks became big business — again within days, there were literally thousands of styles of masks available for sale. Fancy, expensive masks, masks with humorous messages, masks of every shape, size and style.

In Walmart and Target stores, one week after the lockdown began, there were racks of masks for sale... and with mirrors attached to the racks, so people could try them on, see how they looked and then put them back and try others until they found the perfect mask for them. (How sanitary was that?)

It was as if all the supplies for the so-called “pandemic” had already been designed, ordered and shipped prior to the lockdown orders. One might call it the most “efficient” government operation in history. How else were so many places so quickly equipped with custom-fit plexiglass barriers, all those 6’ signs and stickers and all those fashionable masks?

Of course, their “two weeks” turned into months and months. The 4th of July came and went but there were no fireworks or celebrations. People were arrested for walking alone in public parks or swimming in the ocean — alone — in the hot summer sun. Public playgrounds were wrapped in plastic “snow fencing” to make sure the kids were not able to use the playground equipment. Kids playing in their own back yards were reported to police by neighbors. Some of the most absurd and ridiculous rules were mandated during this time — too many to even begin to mention here, but suffice to say, I lost a lot of respect for people who proved too stupid or too cowardly to think for themselves.

Hospitals and nursing homes were transformed into killing centers. Hospitals were incentivized to diagnose as many COVID cases as possible, so no matter what you went to the hospital for — even a broken arm — you definitely had COVID. There was no way you could go to the hospital for anything and not have COVID. Even, of course, if you didn’t.

Hospitals were further incentivized to kill as many patients as possible and the only drug approved for use in treating COVID was Remdesivir — a drug which had been tested in Africa years before, but tests had to be abruptly stopped because more than half of those in the trials were dying from it. Remdesivir, in case you’re one of the few who still haven’t heard, causes acute respiratory distress, followed by kidney failure, followed by cascading organ failure. It quite literally melts one’s internal organs. Then, patients were put on ventilators (with more financial incentives for hospitals) and suffocated to death.

What happened to our medical system during that time is nothing short of reprehensible. I will never trust the medical establishment ever again. And then, of course, we got the “jabs” — depopulation shots that came with a whole host of problems of their own... blood clots, heart attacks, strokes, “turbo cancers,” hundreds of thousands dying “suddenly” or “unexpectedly.” I’m still seeing obituaries today for those who have “died unexpectedly” or “after a short battle with an aggressive cancer.” Let us not forget these jabs were mandated — not by law, but simply because the Regime said so. “Get the jab or lose your job.”

When restaurants opened up again, many required you to wear a mask to enter, then you were allowed to remove it after you were seated. Suffice to say, we didn't play those games. As I explained at the time, the masks did not help anyone avoid getting sick. In fact, re-circulating your own breath over and over through bacteria-laden masks actually caused more illnesses. Their sole purpose was as a prop — they were a constant visual reminder to be fearful of the dreaded COVID virus. It was all a scam.

But COVID was a very convenient tool to manipulate the 2020 elections. It allowed for incredible abuse of our American voting systems. Mail-in ballots. Ballot drop boxes. Postal workers were found to be dumping huge numbers of ballots in dumpsters or in ditches along roadsides. And when needed, those ballots, supposedly from drop boxes, were delivered by the truckload to polling places in the middle of the night.

While Trump is now stating publicly that he really did not win the last election, I think we all know the truth. It's more than obvious that there was extensive election fraud four years ago. It was a stolen election, which anyone with an ounce of common sense can plainly see. Biden himself stated, “We have put together, I think, the most extensive and inclusive voter fraud organization in the history of American politics.” Indeed, they did.

And when examinations and recounts were demanded, Republican poll watchers were not allowed to be present. Cardboard was put up to cover the windows of those polling places. When court challenges took place, they were overseen by George Soros judges. And the mainstream media was absolutely complicit in this greatest voter fraud organization in the history of American politics.

Now, let me cite the first amendment of our Constitution: “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.”

But of course, Congress doesn't and hasn't made any laws like this. They've never needed to. Social media was simply ordered by the Biden Regime to censor the freedom of speech. It was the Regime in power — not the Congress — that weaponized our justice system against doctors stating Ivermectin and HCQ were effective treatments for COVID. It was the Regime that declared advocating for vitamins C and D as being beneficial for one's immune system was “disinformation” and therefore must be banned.

And it was the Regime that set the trap on January 6 that has caught thousands of patriots as they sought to peaceably assemble and petition the Government for a redress of grievances. The FBI is still hunting patriots and sending them to prison, for simply being in DC on that day. And when Congress did an investigation into what the lying media said was an “insurrection,” 40,000 hours of video evidence was excluded. Video showing the Capitol police holding the doors open for people to enter. Video showing Capitol police giving guided tours to peaceful protestors... excluded. Not allowed as evidence in their fake investigation.

To my knowledge, not a single one of the J6 defendants was allowed to use video evidence that would have exonerated them from any crime. Many spent months and years in jail before they were even charged with a crime. Others were let out on bail, but tormented by the government for months and months, and having lost everything, several committed suicide.

And they’re still hunting J6’ers. In May of this year, four years after the event, a 71-year-old grandma from Colorado was convicted on four federal charges — for praying inside the Capitol building. She’ll spend a year in prison. And a friend of mine, a pastor, was just convicted for preaching there that day. He’ll be spending 30 months in federal prison.

Meanwhile, over these last four years, the Regime’s DOJ has been ruthlessly hunting pro-life Christians. Many have just recently been sentenced to prison time — for praying outside an abortion facility. Of course, they’ve never stopped persecuting Donald Trump. Yet he’s still winning in the polls, because people are hoping to “make America great again.”

By that, they mean the ability to just be left alone by the government, rather than hunted down by it and falsely prosecuted by it, for not having their minds “right.” They mean letting kids be kids, rather than brainwashing them to hate their country, their parents, their gender and God. They mean not catering to the small percentage of pink-haired Leftist lesbians whose main goal in life is to ensure as many babies are aborted — before and after birth — as possible.

In the meantime, we have been invaded by tens of thousands of violent criminals from nations that hate us and mean to do us harm. Tens of thousands more gang members. And millions that we really don’t know much about at all. The world is on fire, and World War 3 is brewing. We have Israel at war with it’s neighbors, we have Iran attacking Israel now, funded by the Biden and Obama and Harris Regime. We have Ukraine begging for more money to fight Russia. Several nations threatening a nuclear response. And we have Chinese and Middle Eastern military members training for “something big” right here, right now, in our country.

Americans can’t afford food, housing, utilities and basic necessities. Kamala’s using that tired old threat of Social Security being bankrupt that they use every election cycle... odd that they always say that... no money for social security — which was ours to begin with, taxed when it was earned and taxed again if you get any back... but there’s always a bottomless blank-check for Ukraine, illegal invaders and avoiding government shutdowns.

Kamala says she'll fix it all when she wins the White House. Where has she been the last four years? Trump says he'll make America great again. I'd love to see that, but for the life of me, I can't understand why anyone would want that job. And after two attempts on his life so far, will he even make it to election day...to say nothing of another four years?

And still, so many tell me, over and over and over again, how they don't believe we're on the eve of destruction.

Cardinals attend Fr James Martin's LGBT Synod event promoting expression of homosexual 'love'

When you support the catholic "religion" you are supporting this!

The LGBT briefing event for members of the Synod on Synodality was hosted by Father James Martin and attended by a number of cardinals.

VATICAN CITY (LifeSiteNews) – A number of cardinals and other members of the Synod on Synodality attended a pro-LGBT event hosted by Father James Martin, S.J., and his Outreach group in Rome today, during which a same-sex “married” man called for “love to be expressed.”

“Get to know the real people behind the ‘mask’ who are trying to live a Catholic life,” said Christopher Vella today. “Let’s allow love to be expressed,” he added.

Vella leads the Malta-based LGBT Catholic group Drachma, and spoke today in the hall of the General Curia House of the Jesuits in Rome, at an event held on the sidelines of the Synod on Synodality. He lives as a “bisexual Catholic married to another man.”

Organized by Martin’s pro-LGBT group Outreach and the Jesuit-run America Magazine, the event saw cardinals and other members of the synod gather together to hear the testimony of “LGBTQ Catholics.” It began with a welcome from Father Antoine Kerhuel, S.J., who serves as the secretary of the Jesuits.

Featuring a number of individuals who are “married” to members of the same-sex, the event was called “What is the experience of LGBTQ Catholics?”

Cardinal Stephen Chow, S.J. – synod member and bishop of Hong Kong – led a prayer during the event, while the second-youngest synod member Julia Oseka led the closing prayer.

“Jesus our Lord, teach us to journey with each other with respect and gratitude. We do not take for granted this privilege to listen, to learn and to walk together as synodal companions,” Chow prayed, adding:

Oh, Holy Spirit, send us your guiding light of truth, so that our ignorance and prejudices can melt away through this synodal encounter, and a new morn marked by mutual respect and empathic understanding can take shape in our church for our LGBTQ+ sisters and brothers, as well as for ourselves and our church as a whole

Joining Martin and Vella on the panel was Juan Carlos Cruz, a member of the Pontifical Commission for the Protection of Minors, whom Pope Francis is famously said to have told that “God made you gay.”

That's Fine, If That's What You Believe

There are several common attitudes and beliefs about spiritual matters, Christianity and various world religions. Among the most common are: 1) Most people don't really think about God all that much. 2) They never really consider their eternal destiny, but believe they'll be fine. And 3) They really don't know much at all about the Bible or what it says, but they make drastic, sweeping assumptions about it.

Perhaps the most important thing to note is that most people today believe spirituality should be an individual, private thing, not something talked about, and certainly no one should seek to "convert" anyone else to their faith. "It's whatever you believe," is a common theme. This is moral relativism. "Your truth" may not be "My truth," and the very idea of "truth" is an ever-changing concept. What was true a hundred years ago may not be true today. That may be correct when it comes to our knowledge of science and technology or the cost of living or a myriad of other ever-changing things in our world.

But when it comes to the things of nature and nature's God, there absolutely are absolute truths, which never change. They have never changed, and they never will. Some things in this world are just plain natural and true.

An example of absolute truth is that in all species of animals — and plants — there are two genders: male and female. It takes both genders to reproduce. Two females cannot reproduce, nor can two males. Further, only females can conceive and bear children, but they can't do it without a male father. And only mothers are able to breast-feed their babies.

Today's Leftist Lunatics will try to tell you there are 72 genders and they can't define what a "woman" is. Certainly, they can go to great lengths to try to prove "transgenderism" is a real thing — that it's possible for a male to "transition" to a female. But the absolute truth is, they can take sterilizing drugs, they can get themselves disfigured through diabolical surgeries and they can play "dress up" all they want, but a male can never be anything other than a male, and despite the purple hair, piercings, tattoos, "butch" haircuts and foul-mouthed vocabularies, a female can never possibly "transition" to be a male. Such ideas are delusional, the product of depraved minds that choose to believe the lies of Satan, the enemy of our souls.

For centuries, people heard, believed and knew the truth about the one true God of Creation and His Son, Jesus Christ, but today, when approached with the Gospel message, people will say, "That's fine if that's what you believe, but don't try to tell me about it." When pressed, most people seem to conclude that all the religions of the world ultimately lead to the same god, like spokes of a wheel leading to a center point. So, if you believe in buddah, or allah or Jesus Christ, that is your option, all these are equally valid, and all ultimately lead to the center, to God.

If this is your belief, then it's terribly "intolerant" for someone to say that there's only one way to God, and we can't all just "co-exist" because all the other symbols on that bumper sticker are paying homage to false gods and doctrines of demons. Yes, to our limited human understanding, it would certainly make sense that all the peoples of the world seek God in their own way, following their own traditions; all the peoples of the world believe in a god, and as long as you believe it and follow your religion to the best of your ability, and live a good life and try your best to be a "good person," you will ultimately find God, because there are as many paths to Him as there are people in the world. This way of thinking makes perfect sense — to imperfect, ignorant and self-centered human beings, many of whom believe they themselves are "god." At the same time, the truth of the Gospel is often considered nonsense to these same people, who by the way, are perishing by their refusal to open their minds to the truth we've so graciously been given.

These are just regular, ordinary everyday people from all over the world. Wherever you go, the attitude seems to be the same: 1) There are many paths to God. 2) Follow your path, (your religion), to the best of your ability and you'll get to heaven in the end. 3) Whatever you believe is fine — as long as you're a good person, God will understand, forgive you of any wrongdoing and welcome you to heaven. And 4) Don't try to tell me what you believe. That's fine if that's what you believe, but don't try to make me believe.

So, following this logic, believing something, then, makes it true? As long as you believe it, it's true? That's really what they're saying. Ok, let's see if that theory holds true anywhere in the world...

Let me provide an example. If I had jokingly told my kids when they were small, "Guess what! Today I ordered us an in-ground heated swimming pool. They'll be coming to start work on it next week!" — as young children, they might have believed me.

"Really?! Wow, Dad, is it a big one? When will it be done?" Not knowing any better, they would hardly be able to contain their excitement. They could see themselves jumping in right then. My wife, on the other hand, would know I was only joking. Imagine. The kids believed it. My wife did not. So, because my kids believed it, does that mean that for them, there's a brand new, in-ground heated swimming pool in our backyard for them to play in, and because my wife didn't believe me, for her there is no pool?

"That's a ridiculous example," you say. Really? But the kids believed it. They should have a pool, because whatever you believe is fine, as long as you're a good person, you will get what you believe. Well, bottom line is, we always had lots of grass in our backyard, but there was never a pool. Sorry kids.

Let me give you another example...many years ago, I changed my cell phone number. I tried to inform as many people as I could that the number had changed, but there were still a lot of people who believed my old number was still my number. These folks tried to call me but got someone else. Why would that happen? They believed they had the right number. They even dialed it twice to be sure. Why didn't they get ahold of me?

The keys on a keyboard are laid out in a particular pattern, one that we learn and memorize when we learned to type. As long as we begin typing a letter, article or message with our fingers in the proper place on "home row," what we type will make sense. But if we deviate by moving our fingers over by just one key, we can type away forever, but all we'll end up with is gibberish.

Likewise, if I go to play my guitar and place my fingers on the fretboard in such a way as to form a proper chord, what I attempt to play will sound right. But if just one finger is in the wrong position, on the wrong fret or the wrong string, everyone will immediately know there is such a thing as absolute truth — and the absolute opposite.

You see, folks, it doesn't matter what you believe if it isn't true. If you believe something that isn't true, then it isn't true regardless of how much belief you may have. Some have said, "It's not what you believe, but Who you believe."

Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth and the life. NO ONE comes to the Father, but by Me." (John 14:6). That may sound intolerant, but in fact, it is just simply true.

Satan is our enemy. He plots day and night against us. The last thing he wants is for us to know the truth. Unlike my joke about a swimming pool or making a mistake with a phone number, a keyboard or a guitar, Satan's lies are designed to be deadly.

Many can see the folly of following the violent religion of Islam, yet many more believe it. We can look back to 1997 and remember in sadness and amazement at the "Heaven's Gate" cult. Most people realize it was ridiculous to think a spaceship was cloaked in the tail of the Hale-Bopp comet, yet 39 people believed it so strongly, they committed suicide to meet that spaceship. We remember in horror the sickening images in the news in 1978 when 900 people believed so strongly in Pastor Jim Jones that they followed him to their deaths in the jungles of Guyana.

Remember. Remember these things before you have the attitude of, "That's fine if that's what you believe." It's not fine. Believing lies can kill you. And believe it or not, some people knowingly choose to believe lies. 2 Thessalonians 2, "...and with all wicked deception for those who are perishing, because they refused to love the truth and so be saved. Therefore God sends them a strong delusion, so that they may believe what is false, in order that all may be condemned who did not believe the truth but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

Satan is the father of lies. Perhaps one of his biggest is the lie that says we're more compassionate if we're more tolerant of other views, even if they're in error. In reality, we're not more compassionate, just more cowardly. It takes courage to share your faith. More courage than many people can muster. In our desire to not offend anyone, many Christians stand idly by as our friends and loved ones and acquaintances go happily through life, ignoring God and believing all is well. Parents often think it's more "loving" to be non-judgmental, accepting and affirming when their children fall victim to the "woke mind virus" and declare they're now "homosexual" or "transgender." Or when they turn away from God and accept some weird "new age" form of false spirituality. But Jesus said, "No one comes to the Father but by Me." We could have told them the truth in love, but instead, we wanted them to like us. It was more "tolerant" and "affirming" to let them believe whatever they believed and so many "love" them straight to hell.

But with so many religions in the world, how do we know that Christianity is the one true way to God? We need more than a trite, "God said it, I believe it, that settles it" answer. Getting back to a point I made earlier, many people make broad sweeping assumptions about what the Bible says without ever reading it. These assumptions may come from vague childhood memories of a Sunday School class, things they inferred from Christians they've known in the past, ideas presented in a movie somewhere, or any number of other experiences that together formed their view of Christianity. But they've never really opened the Bible to read God's Words for themselves.

This is dangerous. Because without a solid Bible education, you develop a worldview based on assumptions, with no real facts. It's a foundation for life built on ignorance. In such a case, it's easy to be deceived. And this deception has eternal consequences. In our modern world, it's even easier to take the broad, easy path of not bothering to find out the truth, not even caring about spiritual, eternal things. And today, even if you go to church, you can't rely on that alone for your Christian education. There are many deceivers, many compromisers — and Satan's lies have infiltrated most modern American churches now.

The only way to discover the truth is to read and study the Bible for yourself. Don't take anyone's word for anything. And don't assume you know the Bible if you've never — or rarely — opened one. There are many good resources available to aid your study and help strengthen your walk with the Lord, but there is no substitute for the Book He wrote Himself — and no other place to begin.

Many who consider themselves "spiritual" will revere "ancient" books of wisdom of all kinds, yet despise and dismiss the most ancient of Books, the most reliable of Books, the most sacred and Holy of Books, with the most truth of any Book ever written. Open God's Word. Study it. It's the history of the world, it's the future of all life, and it contains the key to the Kingdom of God. In this world of deception and lies, it's the one thing we really can believe.

Isaiah 59:14, "So justice is turned away and righteousness stands afar off. For truth has fallen in the streets and righteousness cannot enter."

And this, from 2 Timothy 3, "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, without self-control, brutal, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away..."

"...and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

Perilous times are upon us, friends. There is no justice. Truth hasn't just fallen in the streets -- it's been pushed under a bus. Righteousness is not allowed to enter.

How far we've fallen here in America. This isn't the nation I grew up in anymore. Those infected with the "woke mind virus" will call this "progress." It's not. Today, we have a nation of lawlessness and insanity, the by-products of men and women being lovers of themselves, and haters of God. They've worked hard to earn the depraved minds they suffer with. We're a nation of liars who prefer lies over truth. Natural affection between men and women is becoming more and more rare, as once-sane people turn to the profane and succumb to the spirit of Sodom.

There's no doubt that we love pleasure, comfort and ease much more than we love the God who created us and sustains us, even in His patience and longsuffering. And evil men and seducers are growing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived.

Truth is now declared "hate speech," and is punishable under color of law. And in our ignorance and wickedness, we've now banned the one true God of heaven, our only hope of salvation. The One Who sent His Son to Calvary to defeat the works of the devil and to make a way for our forgiveness and restoration is now not only not revered, but openly despised, mocked and hated throughout the Earth, once again.

And they call this "progress." It's purposeful ignorance, self-centeredness and denial of basic, essential truth and common sense. We've exchanged love and sanity for hedonism, and I see no way out of this without the righteous judgment of God Almighty Himself to wake us from this stupor of the "woke mind virus." We are ever "learning" so many new things — Diversity, Equity and Inclusion, Critical Race Theory, Sodomy as a lifestyle and “Transgenderism,” yet we’re never able to come to a knowledge of the truth. Because God isn’t in any of those things.

Today, we can no longer even have an opinion that goes contrary to the many doctrines of demons, or we become targets of attack. All who would live godly in Christ Jesus are suffering persecution, and ever more so each day. Meanwhile, the evil ones are growing more and more evil. This should not surprise us, but simply underscore the fact — told to us in Scripture — that we’re living in the last days, and perilous times have come.

I long ago abandoned Facebook, having been banned multiple times for telling the truth there. It’s a lost cause. Over the past few years, I’ve been a member of a local social media site called “Nextdoor.” Recently, someone posted a Bible verse as an encouragement to another member, and I thanked them for doing that. But almost immediately, the controversy began. People were upset and asked, “Is this right the place to be ‘spouting Scripture?’” I responded, “Every place is the right place to share the Word of God.” Then the God-haters descended on the scene and what was originally meant as an encouragement from a Bible verse turned into ‘spouting Scripture’ and it all became very ugly very quickly.

Yesterday, I closed my account on Nextdoor and am no longer participating in this group for our local area. Here’s what happened. Several weeks ago, an illegal immigrant attacked and raped a local woman, and the local secular newspaper covered the story — including the part we’re never allowed to say out loud — that the attacker was in this country illegally. Now, this is a very left-wing publication, and I was shocked to see they reported it as truthfully as they did. But I posted the story on Nextdoor, to make people aware of what’s happening here, locally.

Stories of other crimes in our area have also been posted by others on Nextdoor, whenever they occur. But my posting of this particular story really brought the wrath of the woke down upon me. It was incomprehensible to most that I would dare post this article — from a secular, Left-wing newspaper — about the violent rape of a local woman...because the rapist was an illegal ‘migrant.’ How dare I?

This situation spiraled so out of control, I eventually realized there was no point trying to have any rational discussion — and I not only ended the conversation, but removed myself from the Nextdoor platform altogether. I want nothing to do with those who publicly support a violent rapist rather than the long-time local resident who was attacked.

The fact of the matter, whether those infected with the “woke mind virus” want to admit it or not is, these illegal invaders are, indeed, wreaking havoc on American citizens. They’ve already committed a serious crime by entering the country illegally, but then to violently attack innocent citizens is horrific. Yet so many just want to pretend it’s not happening.

It is happening. We've all heard of the heart-wrenching killing of Laken Riley, the 22-year-old nursing student murdered by a 26-year-old illegal from Venezuela in Athens, Georgia. And just last month, in Albany, New York, a 21-year-old illegal from Turkey attacked and violently raped a 15-year-old girl who he found walking down a street in her neighborhood.

Also last month, two illegals from Venezuela savagely murdered a 12-year-old girl in Texas. Before killing her, they stripped her naked and assaulted her for two hours. Here are three more cases to consider — all in Florida, all in the past month. A 26-year-old man from Honduras is in jail on charges of unlawful sexual activity with a minor, domestic battery with strangulation and aggravated battery on a pregnant teen. A 43-year-old woman from Guatemala is being held at Palm Beach County Jail on charges of premeditated first-degree murder. She also tried to hire a "hitman" to kill two witnesses in her teenage son's criminal case. And a 20-year-old male from Guatemala is in jail without bond on charges of kidnapping a minor under 13 years of age and sexual assault.

I could give you plenty more examples, but suffice to say, this really is happening. The illegal invaders our current Regime is importing and resettling into our American neighborhoods with our tax dollars are mostly violent criminals. No, not all of them, but certainly numbering in the millions; certainly, enough to be great cause for concern. Meanwhile, the lying media and our government officials either refuse to report these crimes or conveniently omit the fact that the attackers, rapists and killers are here illegally, from many foreign countries around the world — and all living quite comfortably in taxpayer-funded housing.

These people are not here to "assimilate" and become genuine Americans. They came waving the flags of their homelands and they're here to conquer the US, and a majority have no value for human life. All of our major cities have become cesspools of violent crime. I feel bad for those who live there and can't understand why they don't move out. But it's not just the big cities anymore. The assault and rape I told you about happened in my small city, of just 40,000 people.

But also last month, in a very small town here in Wisconsin — an illegal invader attacked a woman and her two young children in their home while they slept. The woman was stabbed 17 times but survived. Both children died of their wounds — one stabbed 16 times and one 20 times... in a tiny town of less than 2,000 people. This is happening all over America now — not just in the big cities. It's everywhere.

But it's not just this country. Recently, we've seen the riots in the UK over Islamic invaders there, taking over huge portions of the country and huge portions of cities. The most recent riots came after word spread that an illegal "migrant" had killed three young girls, ages 6, 7 and 9; attempted to kill eight more children and a teacher. This news spread on social media there, prompting outrage and causing the citizens to finally rise up and say "Enough!" with illegal "migration."

When the full story was heard, it turned out that the alleged killer wasn't an "illegal" but was actually born in the UK. He's 17 years old and was born in Britain to Rwandan parents. So although he's not an illegal immigrant, with all the violence perpetrated in the UK by Islamic invaders, it's understandable how people came to that conclusion.

Now the UK is cracking down on "misinformation" on the internet. So far, 600 people have been arrested for posting or re-posting "misinformation" online about these murders. Three have already been sentenced to jail time for their social media posts, and England now has 6,000 officers trained to scour the internet for people posting "misinformation."

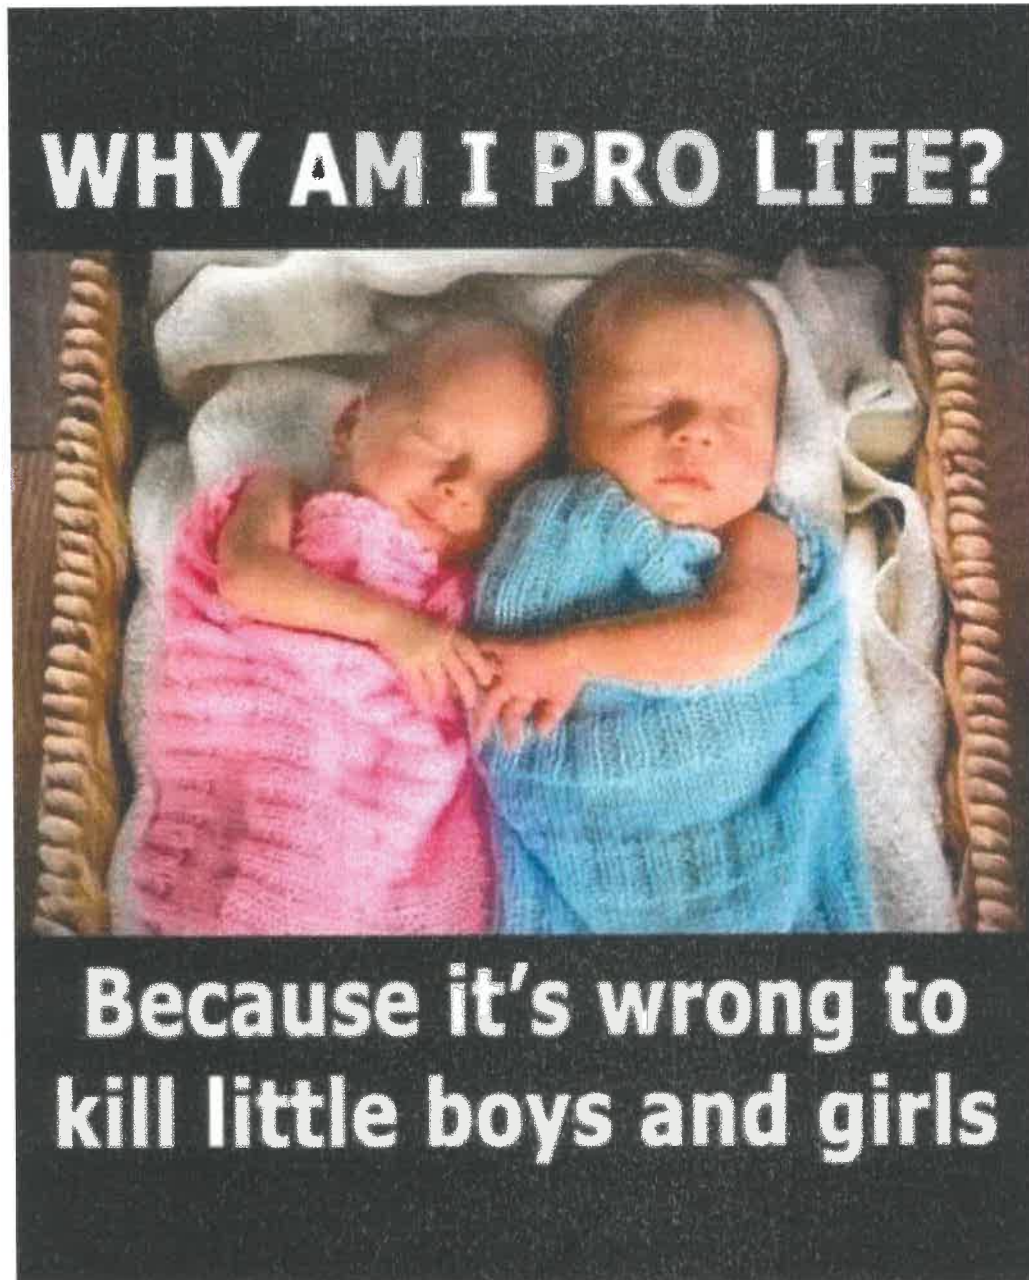

But the bottom line is, no one was killed as the citizens pushed back against the invasion of their country by Muslim Jihadists. Meanwhile, violent crimes and murders are ongoing in that country, mostly by Muslim Jihadists. Another case of the criminals given preferential treatment over those they attack and kill. And England is ramping up their "thought police" division, even threatening to extradite people from other countries — including the US — if they're caught posting "misinformation" of any kind on social media.

Here in the US, Michigan's Secretary of State has joined this Globalist agenda by asking voters to fight "election misinformation" by reporting on their neighbors. We all know what a wide net can be cast when the powers-that-be start talking about "misinformation." Legitimate COVID cures were deemed "misinformation" and "disinformation" and doctors and other health professionals lost their licenses — and everything they had — for simply stating that Vitamins C and D were helpful for COVID. The censorship we experienced then has only gotten worse today. Now, we're attacked for simply reporting that an illegal invader raped a local woman. That's not misinformation. It's the truth. But it's an inconvenient truth for those who are importing the illegals, and therefore, it won't be long before such reporting becomes a "hate crime."

Meanwhile, the city of Minneapolis has just become the first in the nation to allow the hideous Islamic call to prayer to play five times a day, at all hours of the day, throughout the city. They compare it to "church bells." But these prayers involve asking Allah for the death of Christians and Jews, five times a day, every day.

Meanwhile, in the Minneapolis suburb of Bloomington, a man was confronted by "Mall Cops" at the Mall of America for wearing a T Shirt with the words "Jesus Saves." He was told he could either change his shirt or be cited and removed for trespassing. I was recently told by someone who works at the Mall of America that very few Americans shop there anymore. "It's almost completely Muslim," he said. Non-Muslims avoid the place, and stores are shutting down. And while Islam has now conquered England, Christians are being arrested for praying silently outside abortion centers there. And Canada has taken online censorship to levels that have American Communists salivating.

We have much to pray about as the foreign residents among us rise higher and higher above us and we sink lower and lower...and even more to pray about as truth — even the BIBLE — is now considered “hate speech,” or a “thought crime.” And posting on social media today doesn’t just get you into a war of words with others on the platform — in many places, it can get you arrested and jailed. George Orwell’s “1984” wasn’t meant to be an instruction manual, but that’s what it’s become as we continue the “progress” of this Godless world, with the “woke mind virus.”

The Obedience Cult

Not too many years back, warnings of Peak Oil circulated widely, and they made me consider something a good deal more dangerous: Peak Obedience.

If that concept strikes you as odd, there's a reason: We've all been living inside an obedience cult.

In our typical "scary cult" stories, we find people who have given up their own functions of choice and do crazy things because they are told to by some authority. But so long as people are within the cult, none of it appears crazy.

So, inside a cult of obedience, obedience would seem righteous, and more than anything else it would seem normal. And I think that very well describes the Western status quo.

Obedience, however, should not seem normal to us. Obedience holds our minds in a child state, and that is not fitting for any healthy person past their first years of life. It also presupposes that the people we obey have complete and final knowledge; and in fact, they do not: politicians, central bankers, and the other lords of the age have been wrong – obviously and publicly wrong – over and over.

So, obedience is not a logical position to take. Nonetheless, the mass of humanity believes that something horrible will happen if they don't obey. After that, they merely need to be supplied with a defensible reason to comply.

But all of that, even though true, isn't what I'd like you to take away from this discussion. My primary point is this:

When we obey, we make ourselves less conscious; we make ourselves less alive.

Why Obedience Is Peaking

Over the past two centuries, authority has benefited from a perfect storm of influences. There was never such a time previously, and there probably will never be another. Briefly, here's what happened:

Morality was broken

For better or worse, Western civilization had a consistent set of moral standards from about the 10th century through the 17th or 18th century. Then, through the 20th century, those standards were broken.

Note that I did not say morality was changed. The cultural morality of the West was not replaced, but broken. The West has endured a moral void ever since.

Previously, people routinely compared authority's decrees to a separate standard (most often the Bible), to see if they held up. But with Western morals broken, authority was freed from examination, and thus from restraint.

Economies of scale

Factories made it much cheaper to produce large numbers of goods than the old way, in individual workshops. Economists call this an economy of scale. Thus a cult of size began, making "obedience to the large" seem normal.

Fiat currency

Fiat currency has allowed governments to spend money without consequences. It allowed politicians to wage war and to provide free food, free education, and free medicine... all without overtly raising taxes. Fiat currency made it seem that politics was magical.

Mass conditioning

Built on the factory model, massive government institutions undertook the education of the populace. And more important than their overt curriculum (math, reading, etc.) was their invisible curriculum of obedience to authority. Here, to illustrate, is a quote from the esteemed Bertrand Russell, who is himself quoting Johann Gottlieb Fichte, a founding father of public schooling:

Education should aim at destroying free will so that after pupils are thus schooled they will be incapable throughout the rest of their lives of thinking or acting otherwise than as their school masters would have wished.

Mass media

Mass media turbocharged authority and obedience in the 20th century, followed by the free account vultures of Facebook, Google and others. All of this went beyond authority's grandest dreams.

These things created an unnatural peak for authority. But now, this perfect storm is thinning.

Peak Obedience Is Brittle

Through the 20th century, the people of the West built up a very high compliance inertia. They complied with the demands of authority and taught their children to do the same, until it became automatic. People obeyed simply because they had obeyed in the past.

Authority quickly became addicted to this situation, basing their plans on receiving every benefit of the doubt.

Automatic obedience, however, is a brittle thing. Economies of scale are failing, the money cartel has been exposed, government schools have lost respect, mass media is fading away and everyone knows that Facebook is an addiction. The game continues because the populace is distracted and afraid, but that won't last forever.

And Then?

It has long been understood that complex systems breed more complexity, and eventually break themselves. As central authorities try to solve each problem they face, they inevitably create others. Eventually the system becomes so complex, and its costs become so great, that new challenges cannot be solved. Then the system and its authority fail, as they did recently in the Soviet Union.

But again, that's not my primary point. Rather, it's this: Obedience disengages our best parts.

Obedience degrades our creativity; it undercuts our effectiveness and especially our sense of satisfaction.

Don't sign away your life, no matter how many others do.

How the Bible Explains Modern American Politics

By David Deming

It's been said that conservatives view leftists as people with bad ideas, while leftists view conservatives as bad people, period. My personal experiences on social media reinforce this. Any attempt to engage a leftist in a dialogue is futile. There is no bridging the chasm. Not only are leftists unable to construct arguments, they fail to even grasp what an argument is. Logic and facts escape them. It's not that they have bad ideas—they don't have ideas at all.

Significant insight into the leftist mind can be obtained from the Bible. Although the narratives of the Bible are no longer widely accepted as empirical facts, it remains the most influential book in the history of Western Civilization. The stories of the Bible provide unparalleled insight into human psychology. The chronicle of Cain and Abel is one of the memorable and significant parts of the Bible. As Jordan Peterson has pointed out, Cain and Abel are the first real human beings. Adam and Eve were formed directly by God. Their sons, Cain and Abel, are the first humans spawned through the normal biological process. And Cain, the murderer, is the first leftist.

The story is short and tragic. Cain, the older brother, is "a tiller of the ground," while the younger brother, Abel, is "a keeper of sheep." Both brothers make offerings or sacrifices to God. Abel's sacrifices are accepted, but Cain's are not. Cain becomes angry and dejected.

It is a fact that the ancient Hebrews made animal sacrifices. Sacrifices were also made of grain or flour. But the offerings or sacrifices attributed to Cain and Abel were not of this type. Rather, what is being described are not material sacrifices but the sacrifice of the present for the sake of the future. In other words, the delay of immediate gratification for the sake of future well being. This is also the theme of Aesop's fable, the Ant and the Grasshopper. The ant works hard all summer, laying away food for the winter, while the grasshopper dances and plays in idleness. The grasshopper lives for today while the ant diligently prepares for tomorrow. When winter comes, the ant is warm and safe, but the grasshopper freezes and starves to death. The self-discipline necessary to delay gratification and submit to hard work has always been a prerequisite for happiness and success in life.

My interpretation is substantiated by the Biblical text. After Cain becomes angry, God tells him directly that it's his own fault: "if thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door." The rejection of Cain, his failure, is not an arbitrary act by God, but a direct result of Cain's own actions or lack thereof. Nor is it even necessary to believe in God to appreciate the circumstances described here. Cain is not rejected by the whim of a capricious deity. He fails because he does not apprehend natural law, cause and effect, and therefore is unable to manipulate and control his environment.

Faced with the bitter reality of his failure, Cain has the opportunity to do the right thing. He can humble himself, go meekly to his younger brother, and ask for instruction that he might learn and improve his situation. But Cain, like most people, is unable to do this. He is unable to accept the fact of his inferiority and thereby acknowledge the superiority of his brother.

The nature of Cain's deficiency is unspecified. He may lack the discipline to get out of the bed early in the morning and work in the fields. He may lack the intelligence or the common sense necessary to make good decisions. He may be lazy, stupid, or both. The bottom line is that he is inferior to his younger brother in whatever qualities are needed for success in life.

The reality that some people are superior to others is taboo in modern American society. We live in a culture that by historical standards is unusually egalitarian. The roots of our egalitarianism lay in our founding document, the Declaration of Independence, where Thomas Jefferson wrote "all men are created equal." But of course all men are not equal. No matter what metric is employed, no person in the world is exactly equal to any other. No two persons are equal in height, weight, academic or athletic ability, intelligence, or anything that can be quantitatively measured. Even identical twins can develop significant differences during their lifetimes. When he wrote "all men are created equal," Jefferson was referring to equality before the law, not absolute equality. And when Jefferson wrote, even this political equality was implicitly restricted to free white men.

Cain does not fall immediately into error. He broods. "Sin lieth at the door." He doesn't understand Abel, because he lacks the imagination and intellect to conceive of anyone acting differently than he does. He doesn't see that his younger brother has become more successful because he works harder, makes better choices, or has more intelligence and self-discipline. Cain can only imagine another person thinking and acting exactly as he would do himself. Thus he projects all of his deficiencies onto other people.

Ultimately, Cain cannot live with the fact of his inferiority. Hour after hour, day after day, envy gnaws at his ego, and Cain's mind responds by torturing and twisting reality. He attributes his failure to Abel. Abel is not an example to be emulated and admired, but a villain that has somehow, through a million devious devices, exploited Cain. Cain imagines himself to be a victim. Once the nature of the crime and the identity of the perpetrator becomes established in Cain's mind, there can be only one redeeming act: Abel must be killed. The killing of Abel achieves two goals simultaneously. First, Cain obtains all of Abel's possessions and wealth, items that he considers to have been stolen from him. Plunder is transformed into reparation. Second, Cain wipes away the stain of inferiority and establishes in an unmistakable way his own superiority. He has survived and triumphed. Cain is alive, while Abel lays dead, having lost everything. Surely, this is proof of Cain's superiority.

Cain's triumph is short-lived. He becomes a "fugitive and vagabond," "cursed from the earth." Cain can still produce nothing. He can only destroy. He is forever trying to escape from reality. His anger and hatred can never be appeased. Anyone better than him in any way is scapegoated. The die has been set, and Cain can never reverse course and come to terms with his own deficiencies or confront the enormity of his crime.

This is the great division of mankind. Some of us are the sons and daughters of Abel, others the descendants of Cain. Producers and destroyers, good and evil. Productive people value freedom. They only want to be left alone, to be free from predation so they can create and produce. The inferior do not value liberty. Left to their own devices, they fail. They nurture hate and resentment, see themselves as perpetual victims, and forever seek to use force to control others. That's why leftists are perpetually angry, commonly resort to violence, and place no value on individual freedom. They lack the insight to comprehend that anyone could be different, thus they forever project their own psychological propensities onto others. And why is the younger son, Abel, the productive one? The story of Cain and Abel is also a remarkable metaphor of evolutionary biology. While some orders of living things, such as *Coelacanth*s, have undergone little evolutionary change over tens of millions of years, the entire history of human beings is one of rapid brain growth. Over the last two million years, the average human brain size grew from 610 cubic centimeters in Homo habilis to 1350 in Homo sapiens. The younger was vastly more intelligent than the older and better equipped to creatively produce all the necessities of life. The superior replaced the inferior, a process driven by females preferentially choosing to mate with the most intelligent males.

The chronicle of Cain and Abel also explains the history of the United States. When Europeans discovered the Americas, it was a unique opportunity in the history of the world for creative and intelligent people to emigrate and free themselves from incessant predation. The Americas offered danger and hardship, but boundless opportunities. Only an ambitious person in search of the freedom to be productive would have made the dangerous voyage and faced the challenge of the wilderness. Over four centuries, these people and their descendants built the most powerful and prosperous country on earth. The US is the only nation whose government is devoted to protecting the natural rights and liberties of man. But now that the wilderness has been conquered, hardships overcome, and wealth abounds, the US attracts exactly the opposite type of person, the envious predator who only wishes to consume what others have produced.

There is an utter and complete moral clarity to this story. Leftists are evil, because they are in revolt against the natural order of the cosmos. They can only destroy and plunder, they cannot create or produce. Chaos follows everywhere in their wake. There can be no accommodation or compromise with the political left. Appeasement only whets the appetite of the beast. If human civilization is to endure and progress, the political left must be exposed, repudiated, and defeated.

Police Dept. Ordered to Remove Bible Verses

Todd Starnes

A Tennessee police department has come under attack by a vile gang of Wisconsin atheists.

The Bartlett Police Dept. posted a Bible verse on a wall inside their building. The Bible verse is from the New Testament book of Matthew: "Blessed are the peacemakers. They shall be called the children of God."

The Freedom From Religion Foundation, which gets easily triggered by God's Word, noticed the Bible verse while they were snooping on the department's Facebook page.

"Paintings that quote chapter and verse from the New Testament on BPD property are a clear promotion of Christianity," FFRF legal fellow Hirsh Joshi wrote to Bartlett Police Chief Jeff Cox.

The out-of-town atheists claim that placing a biblical quote in a government building "fails to respect the First Amendment."

"Citizens of Bartlett trust their law enforcement officials to attend to their secular duties. Spending taxpayer time and money placing religious messages on police department property is beyond the scope of secular government," the FFRF said.

But local residents are defending the police department and many are suggesting the atheists need to find Jesus.

"Last I checked, the Bartlett Police Department isn't Congress. And art on their wall has not established a religion, nor prevented anyone from practicing one," Shelby County Commissioner Mick Wright told radio station KWAM.

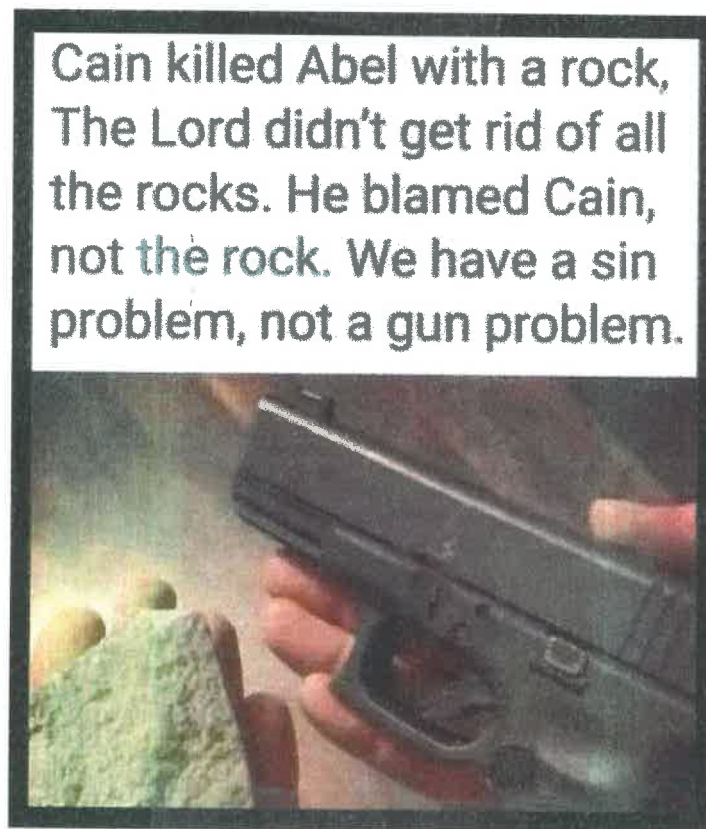

"HOLD THE LINE! Do not cower to these evil instigators," said a KWAM listener. "They will not be the ones who suffer the crime problem that will surge if you surrender."

"A bunch of Atheist Yankee Cheeseheads that not only need Jesus,' said another KWAM listener. "But also need to mind their own damn Business before they FAFO that Bartlett TN doesn't play."

The FFRF insinuated they would take legal action if the Bible verse was not scrubbed from the wall.

"An open profession of Christianity or any religion from an entity sworn to serve and protect is unconstitutional and divisive," said FFRF's Annie Laurie Gaylor. "We remind the Bartlett Police Department that it serves all of the town residents, not just Christians."

The good people of Bartlett should tell the out-of-town rabble-rousers to pound sand.

I miss my father-in-law. He passed away in December of 2020, but he didn't have to. I want to tell you what happened, but first, let me tell you about Bob. That was his name.

Bob had been somewhat hostile toward Christianity for most of the time I had known him. He'd have nothing to do with church or the things of God, and then, when I went into full time ministry in April of 2000, he thought I'd lost my mind...and I'm pretty sure I lost any amount of respect he might have had for me.

This went on for many years, and I'm married to his daughter, Lisa. But our ministry held a big Conference every year, with powerful, dynamic, courageous Christian speakers, teaching on the most vital issues of the day — relevant things. Urgent matters. And we also did street ministry and stood up for righteousness wherever evil raised it's ugly head. Our conferences went on for many years, but Bob never came... until one year, he did.

He made it clear that this was not his kind of thing, and he really had no interest in anything we were doing, and he was only there for us. He told us, "I'll sit and listen to one of these guys, but I'm not going to be staying very long." But God had other plans for Bob. He did sit and listen to one of our speakers, and was so intrigued, he actually stayed for the entire conference.

He came again the following year, and this time, he didn't want to even give up his seat to use the restroom during breaks because he was afraid he'd miss something. And the next year, HE asked ME when our conference would be so he could be sure to be there. You see, he was hearing and learning things he'd never heard before. Not in any church, not from any preacher... because our speakers were bold, courageous men of God and talked about issues that 99% of pastors will never dare speak of, for fear of being "politically incorrect." Bob found out that TRUE Christianity wasn't for the wimpy or the weak. It wasn't about religion and it wasn't a "crutch" for "girly-men." TRUE Christianity is powerful, relevant, vital and exciting...and definitely not for the weak.

He came to every event we put on after that first time. I'd witnessed to him the best I could for years, but it was attending our conferences, meeting my true Christian friends and learning that real Christ-followers were some of the most sensible, knowledgeable, and again, COURAGEOUS people he'd ever met. He was impressed and it changed him. I'd earned back his respect.

After a couple of years of attending our events, when there was an altar call, Bob was the first one out of his seat, to receive Christ. At another event, he was so moved that he did something we never thought we'd ever see: he went to his ex-wife, Lisa's mom, and asked for her forgiveness for divorcing her, many years prior.

I watched Bob's heart and life change through the ministry of Wisconsin Christian News, the wonderful, insightful teachers we had at our events, who I'm honored to call my friends, and of course, the moving of the Holy Spirit.

In 2018, shortly after his wife passed away, Bob moved from Minnesota to Florida. He had some health issues but was managing pretty well. Then one day that summer, we got a call from a hospital in Florida. The doctor told us he had fallen while out shopping and had been taken to the hospital and had been there for four days before they called us. The doctor told us he was on a feeding tube, that he had (at best) two weeks to live and recommended we agree he be sent to a nursing home for his "final days."

My wife and I were on the next plane to Florida to rescue her dad. There was no way we were going to let him die in a nursing home, so far away from his family on the advice of one phone call from one doctor. When we arrived, we discovered that he had been put on a feeding tube because he failed the "swallowing test" and had been aspirating food into his lungs. On further examination, we discovered the reason he failed his "swallowing test" was that they had him on so many mind-numbing drugs, he was rarely even awake.

Instead of a nursing home, we brought him home to live with us at our home in Wisconsin. And it was then that I became his "nurse." Because I work from home, I was able to care for his medical and physical needs, as well as his spiritual needs. Within a week, he was eating regular food again. He quickly regained his strength. Within two weeks, we were able to have his feeding tube removed, and within three weeks, he was back to his old self.

His health continued to improve. He was able to care for all his own personal needs, he was able to go out on his own, drive a car, go shopping, go on trips back to Minnesota and Florida — and go house hunting. He eventually bought his own home near us, and through all of this, I was very blessed to get to know my father-in-law on a much deeper, personal level. We got him off many of the prescription drugs that multiple doctors had prescribed for him like candy, and he felt much better. He was even planning to buy a pontoon boat so he could go fishing again.

Then, in the fall of 2020, he had a pacemaker put in. He'd been having trouble with his heart and everyone thought this would be a good solution. Unfortunately, the pacemaker was installed incorrectly and things actually got worse for him. The doctors' solution was to put him on more prescription drugs, which made him disoriented and depressed, and he was again aspirating his food into his lungs, causing an infection.

In December of that year, I took him to his primary doctor because he was sure he had pneumonia. He did have pneumonia and the doctor immediately placed him on antibiotics for it, and told him it would take a week or so before he started feeling better. But that wasn't fast enough for Bob. That night, he walked into the emergency room on his own, looking for a faster solution.

Note that this was at the height of the planned-demic in 2020. If only I'd known then what I know now, I never would have let him go there. They immediately stated that he didn't have bacterial pneumonia, but "COVID pneumonia," and they admitted him to the hospital. They had a "fish" on the line and the hook was set. The first thing they did was take him off the antibiotics his primary doctor had placed him on that very same day.

The rest of that week is an odyssey I still find hard to comprehend. Since there was a so-called "pandemic" going on, there were no visitors allowed. I called the doctor every day, explaining that this all started shortly after he had a pacemaker put in and he was placed on more drugs, and that he'd been aspirating his food, which caused him to have bacterial pneumonia. The doctor's response was, "He had a pacemaker put in? When was that?"

Every day I would call and every day he had a different doctor, and every day I had to tell the same story over again. He had a pacemaker put in. They put him on more drugs that caused him to be disoriented and he'd been aspirating his food. His primary doctor gave him a prescription for antibiotics and he NEEDS those antibiotics to get better. And every day, the new doctor would ask, incredulously, "He had a pacemaker put in? When was that?"

I can't describe the frustration. It seemed no one knew or cared about Bob's medical history, no one read any of his charts and no one was doing anything to help. Furthermore, he was now a "hostage," because no one was allowed in the hospital. No visitors. When I asked about getting him out of the hospital, I was told he couldn't be released, and if we insisted, it would be "AMA" (Against Medical Advice), which would mean his insurance wouldn't cover anything and he would be personally liable for enormous hospital bills.

This was the time when we were all told the hospitals were "overflowing" with COVID patients. Patients were stacked up in hallways, because there weren't enough rooms. Hospital staff was working 24 hours a day and couldn't keep up. It was all a big lie.

On the fourth day of his incarceration at the hospital, I WAS allowed to see him, because the doctor told us he was near death. I was only allowed to go see him because I had clergy credentials, and he was about to die. That was the one and only time during the whole COVID scam that I wore a mask. I checked in at the desk, had to be tested for COVID myself, and was finally allowed to go to his room, which was about a mile away.

As I walked there, I noticed something that didn't match the narratives put forth by hospitals, Fauci & Co. and the mainstream media. The hospital was definitely NOT "overflowing" with patients. Staff was NOT overwhelmed. In fact, during that mile-long walk to Bob's room, I didn't pass a single doctor, nurse or even anyone pushing a food cart. The place was deserted.

He was in terrible shape, much worse than when he walked into the ER that first night. And no one knew much of anything about his case. I demanded he be released to our care. The only way that could be accomplished was by sending him home on hospice care. We agreed, and he was to be released at 10 am the next morning.

The next morning came and they didn't release him. Every hour, we called the unit he was in and no one had even checked on him yet, gotten him dressed or did anything to prepare for his release. It was 8 pm that night, with freezing rain pouring down, that they finally pushed him out in a wheelchair, nearly dead, and returned him to us, like they were pushing a garbage bin to the dumpster. I had to literally lift him into my van to drive him home.

I had hopes of getting him back to health again, getting him back on the antibiotics he needed in the first place, giving him some food (of which he'd had NONE for an entire week). But the hospice team wouldn't allow it. They began their "end of life" regimine with drugs to keep him sedated. Clearly, their only plan was for him to die. There was no option for him to get better.

If I'd only known then what I know now. It was two years later that I learned what had happened to everyone who entered ANY hospital during that time. It was the "official hospital protocols." Anyone with upper respiratory symptoms was immediately labeled a "COVID" patient. Those who actually had COVID (which Bob did not), were forbidden from receiving life-saving treatments like Ivermectin and Hydroxychloroquine. These were banned nationwide. Some families went to court so their loved ones could be given these meds. Some won and survived. Most times, the hospitals won and people died.

And the official nation-wide hospital protocol — and the ONLY drug allowed for use in American hospitals for COVID — was Remdesivir. I didn't learn of this until two years after Bob died, when multiple doctors and scientists came out and blew the whistle on it. Remdesivir, they said, was actually a bio-weapon. It had been tested in Africa, but so many people died during the tests, that testing was halted. Yet this is the ONLY drug Fauci allowed for use in our hospitals.

It has a long list of adverse effects on the human body, the first of which is upper respiratory distress, quickly followed by kidney failure, followed by "cascading organ failure." This causes the lungs to fill with fluid; then the patient is placed on a ventilator and suffocated to death.

That's what happened to Bob. His kidneys, liver and other internal organs failed...all things he'd never had any problems with — until he was kidnapped by the hospital. Remdesivir literally melts internal organs. And in return, the hospitals all across this country received hundreds of thousands of dollars per patient in "incentives" to follow this deadly protocol. Countless people died needlessly, including my father-in-law, Bob. If only I knew then what I know now. I miss him, every day.

Science And The Bible Just Keep Confirming One Another

It has been quite a week, hasn't it?

Today, I want to give all of you a preview of some of the things that I have been working on.

People need to understand why they believe what they do, and that has really been on my heart lately.

And I want to thank my faithful core supporters for making it possible for me to reach thousands upon thousands of people in more than 100 different countries with this sort of information each month. When you purchase my books or subscribe to this newsletter, you are supporting work that is changing lives. I hear from people that live in nations all over the planet that have been touched by my work, and it is only because of you that this is possible.

Some of you will be familiar with the information that I am going to share below, and some of you will not.

Ultimately, the goal is to get this sort of information to as many people around the world as we possibly can.

If the universe and everything in it really were designed by some entity, that entity would have to possess extremely advanced scientific knowledge. In fact, that entity would need to have a far greater understanding of scientific principles than we do. Despite all of the incredible technology that we have developed, a single human cell is far more complex than anything that we have ever created. It is just within that past several decades that we have begun to understand the sheer complexity of life on this planet.

The Bible says that a God that loves us far more than we can possibly imagine created us and everything that we see.

That is actually really good news.

Can you imagine what our world would be like if it had been created by some incredibly evil entity?

The God of the Bible is a God of goodness, He is a God of order, and He is a God of science.

And in recent years science and the Bible have been confirming one another again and again.

Of course the Bible is not a science textbook.

It is a love letter to humanity that tells the entire story of the human race from the very beginning to the very end.

But when the Bible speaks on matters of science, it is accurate.

For example, the Bible tells us that our universe is filled with vast numbers of stars. In fact, it compares the number of stars to the number of sand grains along the shore. This is what Genesis 22:17 says...

That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore: and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies

In ancient times, humans could see that there were thousands of stars in the sky, but they had no idea how vast the universe really is.

Today, it is estimated that there are 200 billion trillion stars in the universe.

Put another way, there are approximately 200 sextillion stars in existence.

That is a lot of stars!

Interestingly, it has also been estimated that there are approximately 7.5 sextillion grains of sand on our planet.

So if you are going to compare the number of stars in the universe to something on Earth, sand would be perhaps the closest thing.

The Bible also tells us that every star is different. The is what 1 Corinthians 15:41 says...

There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory.

In ancient times, humans had no idea that each star is very unique.

To the naked eye, they pretty much all look the same.

But now we know better.

In Job 26:7, we are told that the Earth does not rest on anything...

He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.

Throughout history, various civilizations have come up with all sorts of bizarre theories about our planet.

For example, there is one ancient myth about the Earth resting on the back of a giant sea turtle.

Needless to say, that is not true.

Today, we know that the Earth is not sitting or resting on anything, and that is what the Bible said all along.

Let me switch gears and discuss the hydrologic cycle for a little bit.

There are several places in the Bible where we see accurate descriptions of the hydrologic cycle. For instance, Amos 9:6 tells us that God “calleft for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth”.

That is pretty remarkable.

But that isn't the only example...

–“He causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth; he maketh lightnings for the rain: he bringeth the wind out of his treasures.” (Psalm 135:7)

–“When he uttereth his voice, there is a multitude of waters in the heavens, and he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth; he maketh lightnings with rain, and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures.” (Jeremiah 10:13)

–“For he maketh small the drops of water: they pour down rain according to the vapour thereof: Which the clouds do drop and distil upon man abundantly. Also can any understand the spreadings of the clouds, or the noise of his tabernacle?” (Job 36:27-29)

How is it possible that these passages express an advanced knowledge of the hydrologic cycle when they were written at a time when humanity had no idea how it really worked?

Amazingly, we even see knowledge of the second law of thermodynamics in the Bible.

According to the second law of thermodynamics, the universe and everything in it is continually moving toward a state of entropy.

In other words, the universe and everything in it are wearing out over time.

The Bible is in full agreement with this.

Psalm 102:25-26 tells us the following...

²⁵ Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands.

²⁶ They shall perish, but thou shalt endure: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment: as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed

And this is what Hebrews 1:10-12 says...

¹⁰ And, Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands:

¹¹ They shall perish; but thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment;

¹² And as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail.

The Bible also demonstrates advanced knowledge of human biology.

In Genesis chapter 17, God instructed Abraham that every male child “who is eight days old among you” was to be circumcised.

So why would God specifically choose the eighth day?

Not having enough vitamin K is the primary cause of vitamin deficiency bleeding, and prior to the eighth day newborns simply do not yet possess sufficient quantities of Vitamin K.

In addition, it turns out that the coagulating factor in the blood, prothrombin, is the highest that it will ever be in the entire life of a male on the eighth day.

So the eighth day is literally the perfect day to circumcise a male child.

Another example is found in Leviticus chapter 17.

In Leviticus 17:11, we are told that “the life of the flesh is in the blood”, and that is so true.

Oxygen, water and everything else that our cells need to function is carried through our blood.

Without our blood, there is no life.

At the time of the American Revolution, sick people were still being “bled” in order to cure them of various diseases.

It was a barbaric practice, and it was a very foolish thing to do.

If they just read their Bibles, doctors at that time would have understood that the life of the flesh is in the blood.

Leviticus chapter 17 also instructs us not to eat blood.

For centuries, we did not understand why this is important.

But now we know that blood can carry various pathogens.

In addition, the Bible instructs us not to eat pork, shellfish and other creatures that can make us very, very sick.

Of course most people continue to eat such creatures today even though science has confirmed the dangers of eating them.

In particular, I don’t understand why so many people still eat so much pork. Study after study has shown that eating pork is a highway to heart disease, cancer and diabetes.

Before I end this discussion, there is one more thing that I wanted to mention.

In the Book of Leviticus, there are more than a dozen references to the benefits of bathing in water.

For most of human history, this was not well understood.

In fact, as late as the Middle Ages common people did not bathe often, and there are many that believe that this greatly contributed to the spread of the bubonic plague throughout Europe.

It wasn't until the 1860s that French chemist Louis Pasteur developed modern germ theory. Now we understand the importance of washing our hands under running water and regularly taking baths or showers.

What I have covered here is just the tip of the iceberg.

But hopefully it gives you some idea of how science and the Bible have been confirming one another through the years.

The God who created all things knows exactly what He is doing.

And He wants to have a relationship with you.

We Really Are Living In The End Times

MICHAEL SNYDER

Is it possible that Jesus specifically warned us about the times that we are living in nearly 2,000 years ago? You may have noticed that global events have started to spiral out of control lately. Normally, the summer is a period when things are relatively quiet. As far as the news industry is concerned, August is supposed to be the quietest month of all because so much of the world is on vacation. But that definitely has not been the case in 2024. According to journalist Simon Tisdall, in recent weeks we have been experiencing a “peaking of volatility, instability and insecurity, unprecedented in recent times”...

August is the quietest month -- to mangle TS Eliot's verse -- or so news editors used to think. Politicians go on holiday, governments shut down, people head for the hills or the beach. Not much happens. Not so this August. The world this month is experiencing an extraordinary peaking of volatility, instability and insecurity, unprecedented in recent times. It's scary, it's shocking, it's a wild ride.

*Sudden revolutions, wars current and imminent, terrible crimes, high-stakes feuding, famines, cost of living crunches, violent riots and unfathomable market panics come not as single spies but in battalions. In a world where mutual destruction, steeped in cruelty and despair, is a favoured human pastime, grim vistas of Eliot's The Waste Land beckon anew.*

He is right.

But just because things have been crazy lately does not mean that we are living in the end times.

If we really are living in the end times, there are certain very specific signs that we should be seeing.

In Matthew chapter 24, Jesus discussed some of those signs...

6 And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass. but the end is not yet.

7 For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places.

8 All these are the beginning of sorrows.

Of course there have been wars, famines, pestilences and natural disasters all throughout human history.

If we really are living in the end times, all of these elements should be occurring simultaneously, and the intensity of each element should be at a very high level.

Let's talk about war first. According to the Institute for Economics & Peace, there were 56 active military conflicts in the world last year. That was the highest number that we have witnessed since World War II...

Ukraine, Gaza, Sudan, Ethiopia, Afghanistan, Syria, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Colombia... and so on. There are up to 56 active conflicts in the world, the highest number since World War II. Moreover, these carry an increasingly international component, with 92 countries involved in wars outside their borders. These are data from the latest Global Peace Index produced annually by the Institute for Economics & Peace (IEP), a think tank that analyzes everything from military investment and the cost of violence to military laws and deaths in combat in 163 states and territories.

As I write this, there is a tremendous amount of speculation all over the globe about "World War III". The conflict in the Middle East is on the verge of being transformed into an "all-out war", it is probably only a matter of time before the U.S. is dragged into the war in Ukraine and we find ourselves directly fighting with Russia, and the moment that China invades Taiwan we will be at war with the Chinese.

We are most certainly living during a time of wars and rumors of wars, and the hot phase of “World War III” will truly be unlike anything we have ever seen before.

All throughout history, famine has accompanied war.

Right now, we are facing a global food crisis of unprecedented magnitude. In Sudan, endless war has created a famine that is truly horrifying. At this moment, it is being projected that millions of Sudanese citizens will die in the months ahead...

After 15 months of fighting in that country between the Sudanese Armed Forces (SAF) and the paramilitary Rapid Support Forces (RSF), experts in food insecurity estimate that almost 26 million people (no, that is not a misprint!), or more than half of Sudan's population, could suffer from malnutrition by September. Eight and a half million of those human beings could face acute malnutrition. Worse yet, if the war continues on its present path, millions will die of hunger and disease in just the coming months (and few people in our world may even notice).

How would you feel if you had to watch your family slowly die of starvation?

According to Timmo Gaasbeek of the Netherlands Institute of International Relations, 2.5 million people in Sudan could perish “by the time crops are harvested in September”...

Gaasbeek warned, however, that soup kitchens can fill only so many gaping holes in a system shattered by wartime destruction, displacement, and crop failure. His institute estimates that at current rates of food sharing, 2.5 million people could die of hunger and disease by the time crops are harvested in September. In other words, a shocking 10–20 percent of the Sudanese in the hardest-hit areas could die—mortality rates similar to ones suffered during horrendous famines in parts of Nigeria in 1969, Ethiopia in 1984, and Somalia in 1992.

September is next month!

But most Americans don't even realize that this is happening because our big news networks only want to talk about Kamala Harris and Donald Trump.

Reuters has reported that hunger is so bad in some parts of Sudan that people are literally making meals out of balls of dirt just so that they will have something to fill their stomachs...

Garang Achien Akok is one of the thousands of new arrivals in the area. Akok, his wife and their five children abandoned their home in the southern region of Kordofan after Arab militiamen on camels stormed their village and torched their hut, he said.

Akok, 41, reached Al Lait in December, but has no work and can't feed the family. At times, they go two or three days without eating. When that happens, Akok said, he watches helplessly as his wife and children dig holes in the ground with a stick, slide their hands in and grab some soil. Then they roll the soil into a ball, put it in their mouths and swallow it with water.

Meanwhile, supplies of food all over the world just keep getting tighter and tighter.

CNN has admitted that we are facing "the worst food crisis in modern history", but the truth is that this is just the beginning.

Once nuclear weapons are used, everything will change.

One study that was conducted a few years ago determined that three to four years after an all-out nuclear war global food production would have dropped by about 90 percent...

Using climate, crop and fishery models, researchers found that the climatic impacts of soot from nuclear war would peak in the first few years but last for about a decade.

In the worst-case scenario, when 150 Tg of soot is unleashed, the global average calorie production from crops would decline by about 90% just three to four years after the nuclear war, the study found.

That same study concluded that approximately 360 million people would be directly killed during an all-out nuclear war between the U.S. and Russia, and over 5 billion people would die from starvation in the aftermath...

The largest scenario examined, a week-long war involving 4,400 weapons and 150 Tg, or 330.6 billion pounds, of soot – such as one that would occur between the U.S., its allies and Russia – would kill 360 million people directly – and more than 5 billion from starvation, the study said. The density of the soot would reduce global temperatures by more than 58°F.

What would our world look like if 5 billion people were simultaneously dying from starvation?

That is something to think about.

If we really are living in the end times, we should also be experiencing major pestilences.

Needless to say, the COVID crisis killed millions of people and it is still with us.

Over the past few years, the bird flu has resulted in the deaths of hundreds of millions of chickens and turkeys all over the globe, and now the bird flu has jumped into mammals.

Are we next?

We better hope not, because the World Health Organization says that over 50 percent of the humans that have caught H5N1 since 2003 have ended up dead.

In 2022, a Monkeypox plague rapidly spread all over the planet, and it created a lot of fear.

Now a far deadlier version that reportedly spreads more easily among humans is spreading in central Africa, and the World Health Organization is extremely concerned about this.

And I certainly don't want to leave out dengue fever. So far this year, there have been more than 10 million cases in North America and South America combined...

In the Americas alone, almost 10.4 million suspected cases of dengue, a mosquito-borne viral disease, were reported to the World Health Organization in 2024 as of the first week of July, an increase of 232% compared with the same period the year before.

Peru is a case in point. When torrential rains started to fall there in 2023, a record-breaking dengue epidemic exploded shortly afterward. The case count is estimated at well over 100,000 so far this year.

If you have ever had a severe case of dengue fever, you will never forget it.

It is known as "breakbone fever", because many of those that develop severe cases literally feel like their bones are breaking...

Because some patients feel as if their bones are breaking, the virus has an ominous nickname: "breakbone fever."

What about natural disasters?

Are we seeing a lot of those?

It is being reported that last year the number of "billion dollar disasters" established a brand new all-time record high...

The planet was besieged by a record 63 billion-dollar weather disasters in 2023, surpassing the previous record of 57 set in 2020, said insurance broker Gallagher Re in its annual report issued January 17. The total damage wrought by weather disasters in 2023 was $301 billion, with an unusually high 57% of that total being insured damages.

Meanwhile, the ground under our feet is shaking with alarming regularity.

Last week, I wrote an article about the strange seismic activity that we have been witnessing on the west coast, on the east coast, under the Great Lakes and down in Texas.

On the other side of the world, all of the recent shaking in Japan has created a tremendous amount of panic. People are feverishly hoarding food because they are so concerned about the possibility of a “megaquake”...

Authorities in Japan urged people to avoid hoarding as anxiety over a possible megaquake triggered a spike Saturday in demand for disaster kits and daily necessities.

In its first such advisory, the weather agency said a huge earthquake was more likely in the aftermath of a magnitude 7.1 jolt in the south on Thursday which left 14 people injured.

At a Tokyo supermarket on Saturday, a sign was put up apologising to customers for shortages of certain products it attributed to “quake-related media reports”.

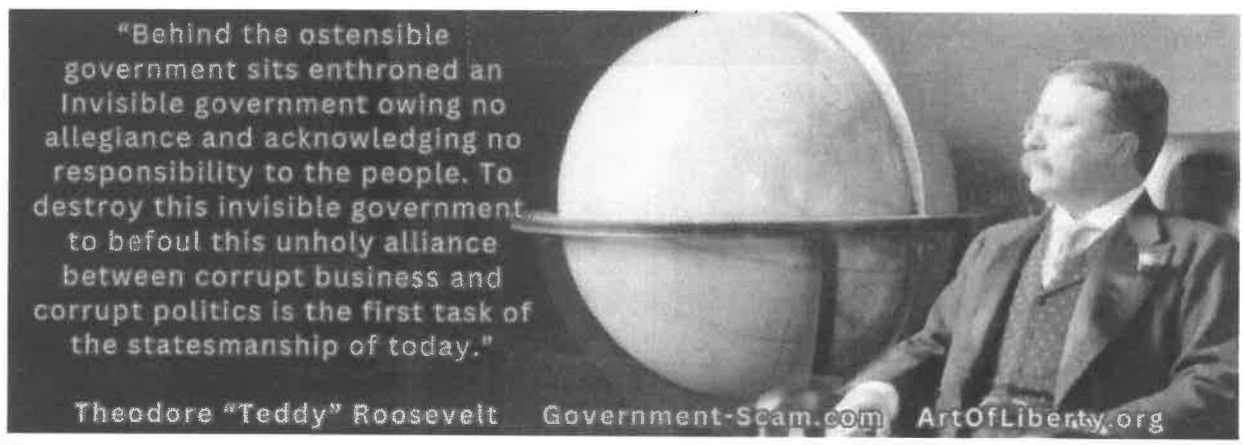

I am entirely convinced that everything that we have been through so far is just the beginning.

We are still only in the very early chapters of this “perfect storm”, and if I am right there is a tremendous amount of death and destruction ahead of us.

Most people don’t want to hear that.

Most people just want to hear that everything is going to be wonderful.

But if we really are living in the end times, global events will play out just as the Bible says that they will.

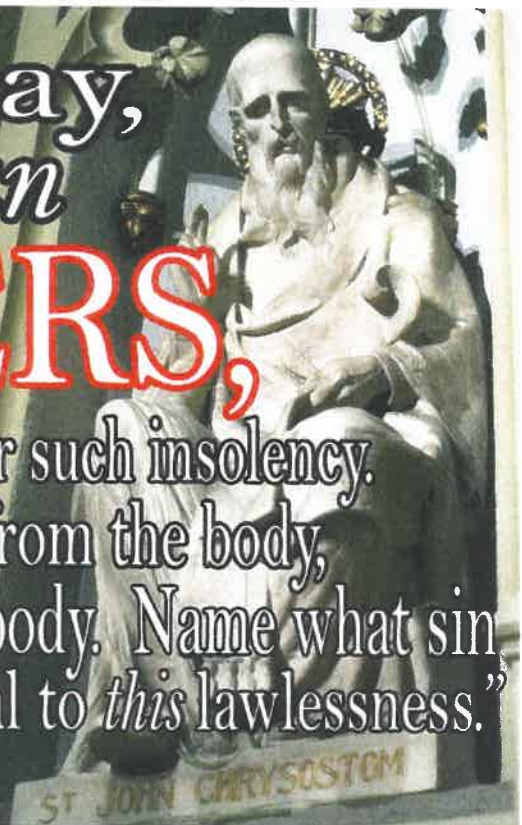

“Sodomites, I say,
are even worse than

MURDERERS,

since to die is better than to live under such insolency. For the murderer dissevers the soul from the body, but this man ruins the soul with the body. Name what sin you will, none will you mention equal to this lawlessness.”

To Humbly Submit

by Jeff Thomas

Submission to the state is a time-honoured tradition, a concept supported by governing bodies since time immemorial.

In days of yore, men submitted to whichever member of the tribe was the mightiest in battle. By doing so, they stood a better chance of succeeding in battle, thereby diminishing the likelihood of their own death or enslavement.

Later on, as tribes became more tied to the land and communities sprang up, the idea of a strong leader still made sense. Not only might he do the best job of leading the protection of the town or village, he might also travel outside the community to attack other communities, bringing back spoils for all to benefit from. (Not too civilised, maybe, but still, the reasoning behind submission to the leader made sense.)

Later, settlements grew larger and, increasingly, many villages and towns would find themselves joined together collectively, under a national banner, with a single army to protect them. And, again, the leader would most likely be a fierce and formidable warrior. But a significant change was taking place. Whilst the warrior leader was away (sometimes for years), invading other communities, it was necessary to have leadership at home – administrative leadership. Predictably, this leadership also sought the loyalty and submission of the people.

There was a new wrinkle at this juncture as the administrative leadership did not have to prove itself repeatedly in battle to gain submission. It was expected merely due to the fact that the leaders held power over the people.

The expectation of loyalty and submission to a government simply because it is the government is an unnatural and invalid one.

Today, most leaders are primarily political rather than military, and even those who wear a military uniform almost never take part in actual battle, let alone lead the charge. For this reason, the original reason for loyalty and submission should be outmoded.

Why, then, does it persist? Well, in fact, it generally persists as long as there is prosperity and a people are prepared to tolerate dominance. However, should prosperity diminish dramatically, obeisance tends to diminish accordingly. At some point, the leaders conclude that they may be losing the submission of the people and need to reinforce it. This is done by one of two methods and, on occasion, both at the same time.

The first is force. An increased police state can create a greater assurance of submission through fear of those in uniform.

The second is inspiration. A condition of warfare often succeeds as a method of inspiring people to give up some of their rights and fall in behind a leader. Although, in the modern world, we never see a national leader actually suiting up for battle, the mere fact that he's in charge of the fight from a safe distance often works to inspire people to be more submissive to an administrative government.

Following the English Revolution of 1688, we Britons found that our political leaders made the decision for us as to what our relationship should be to our new leaders at the time. They declared to the new joint monarchs, William and Mary, "We do most humbly and faithfully submit ourselves, our heirs and posterities, forever."

Quite a mouthful. It certainly left no doubt as to the intent of Parliament – that the people of England were never again to question their rulers and, further, that regardless of any possible changes in policies, laws, and edicts by future kings, the people swore submission ... permanently.

This did not sit well with all Englishmen – not surprisingly since they hadn't been asked whether they wished to make such a declaration of submission. In 1774, an Englishman named Thomas Paine (on the advice of his American friend Benjamin Franklin) immigrated to the Pennsylvania colony and began writing pamphlets that dealt directly with the concept of “unquestioned loyalty and submission”, a concept with which he heartedly disagreed. Perhaps he stated it best in his book, The Rights of Man, first published in 1791:

“Submission is wholly a vassalage term, repugnant to the dignity of freedom.”

Mister Paine’s pamphleteering in the late eighteenth century did not actually create the consciousness that brought on the American Revolution, but his phrasings did provide focus for the colonists in stating their grievances against King and Parliament.

Although Mister Paine’s pamphlets served as guidebooks to liberty and his input contributed to the framing of the US Constitution, he’s not remembered today as one of the seven founders of the United States. But one of those who is recognised today as a founder, Thomas Jefferson, took a very similar view to that of Thomas Paine:

“When the Government fears the people, there is liberty. When the people fear the government, there is tyranny.”

Both men believed that it was (and is) essential to assure that any government be reminded continually that it exists to represent the people who pay for its existence. They each echoed a view taken 2,100 years earlier by Aristotle, who commented,

“[G]overnment should govern for the good of the people, not for the good of those in power.”

Although these words were not quoted in either the Declaration of Independence or the Constitution, Aristotle’s principles were well-known to all of the Founding Fathers and were frequently the basis of clauses written in each of the US’s founding documents.

Another quote from Jefferson suggests that it’s entirely predictable that any government is likely to continually work toward increasing its own power over a people. That being the case, from time to time, any government needs to be slapped down and reminded that its task is to serve the people, not to subjugate them:

“Whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new government.”

Here's a final thought to consider:

The concept of government is that the people grant to a small group of individuals the ability to establish and maintain controls over them. The inherent flaw in such a concept is that any government will invariably and continually expand upon its controls, resulting in the ever-diminishing freedom of those who granted them the power.

In reviewing all of the above, it should be clear that it's the nature of all governments to seek to increase their power over those that they are sworn to represent. It should also be understood that they will not give up this power willingly. At some point, they become successful enough in establishing submission that the populace must either toss out the people in the government, toss out the governmental system, or take exit from the system. The last of these may be chosen in order to more peacefully regain liberty.

Each of these possible choices requires dramatic change, although the last of these entails less upheaval or danger to the individual.

The alternative to making such a choice, and the one that the great majority of people in any culture, in any era, choose, is to humbly accept submission. Only a very small minority will actually take positive action to attain freedom over tyranny through internationalisation.

Editor's Note: Unfortunately, most people have no idea what really happens when a government goes out of control, let alone how to prepare...

www.WisconsinChristianNews.com

It's really too bad that I need to take time out of my very busy schedule to address today's topic. I've been publishing Wisconsin Christian News for 25 years now, so I know that what I'm about to share with you is par for the course and to be expected, but it still bothers me a lot. Even though I know this is just another attempt of Satan to get under my skin and weigh me down with discouragement, I can't seem to just let it go. So, let me tell you what happened yesterday.

I was busy working in my office, trying to cross as many things off my "to do" list as possible when the phone rang. It was a man who had found Wisconsin Christian News for the first time at one of our public news racks. He told me he was impressed by the cover and glad to find a Christian newspaper out in public, but then, how he was immediately disgusted by, as he put it, "all the political crap" we published.

"What's with all the political crap in here?" he asked. But he didn't really want to listen to anything I had to say. In fact, I couldn't get a word in edgewise. "I thought we weren't supposed to mix politics and religion," he said. And then, as critics like this always love to do, he attempted to "scare" me by saying, "I was going to subscribe to this paper but there's no way I'll do that now!" These guys always say this as if losing the $2 "profit margin" we receive per year on an annual subscription is going to strike tremendous fear into my heart.

It would have been nice if I were able to have a discussion with him, but then again, over the years, I've come across so many others just like him, that I know it's futile. Just as well that he hung up on me after yelling at me for publishing what he considered to be "political" material.

But this situation gnawed at me all day, and it's still gnawing at me today. So much so that I went back in my files to see what articles could have set him off enough to bother making the call. People will rarely contact me with positive, encouraging messages, but seem to be very eager to call and tell me how I'm doing everything wrong.

There were a couple articles on how God was mocked during the opening ceremonies for the Olympics in Paris. An article on Repentance, God's Law and the Republican National Convention; one on the new LGBTQP+ curriculum elementary school kids will be subjected to in public schools this fall. We ran a commentary on how the mainstream media is stumping for Kamala Harris; one about how our government is supposed to have a system of checks and balances with three separate branches; an investigation into the Trump assassination attempt; and one on the sanctity of life for preborn babies.

But the rest of the paper was all Bible teaching, letters to the editor, health-related articles, parenting articles, and several on building strong marriages and families. If I'd had the chance, I would have explained that we are a NEWSpaper, and therefore, we include news in each issue. Our articles are all from a Christian perspective and worldview, but yes, we do and will continue to cover things like the upcoming elections, tyrannical government, the New World Order, plans of the Globalists, the LGBTQP+ grooming and exploitation of our children and more.

We'll continue to publish real information on the invasion of our nation by foreign enemies. We'll speak up when Christ-followers are unjustly hunted and persecuted by our Justice Department, jailed for standing in the gap for the preborn or for praying in public. We'll let you know when injustice claims yet more victims.

I don't see these things as being political. In fact, everything this man would have claimed is "political" are actually moral and spiritual issues, but he'll never come to understand that. Something he said made it all clear to me. He said, "I thought we weren't supposed to mix politics and religion." Clearly, he's been well trained by a cowardly, weakling "pastor" somewhere, in a "stained glass fortress" steeped in "churchianity."

Again, moral and spiritual matters should not be confused with political ones. But even in the realm of politics, I believe Christians should not only be present, but front and center and in charge. I won't apologize for that. How different would our society and our modern American culture be right now if our government leaders were true Christ-followers?

Do you think we'd have this unbridled lawlessness in our streets? Would we have abortion up to — and beyond — the moment of birth? Would we have feminine hygiene products stocked in our male restrooms in public schools and other public places? Would our public schools have litter boxes in the restrooms for those students who identify as cats? Would we have pornography being read to our tiny children by so-called "teachers?" Would 25% of our children be confused about their gender? Would 47% of our children "identify" as some type of LGBTQP+?

If Christians were involved in politics — and pastors properly spoke the truth from their pulpits — would God be mocked and ridiculed at every public event — the Olympics being just one example of many? Would the media be allowed to lie to us constantly with impunity? Would school boards be able to push through whatever horrific agenda they wanted — causing serious mental and physical abuse of our children, regardless of what parents wanted? For that matter, would our children, right now, be being groomed by sodomites in public schools, masquerading as "teachers," without parents even knowing about it?

And if Christians were properly taught — by courageous pastors — to push back and stand as a restraining force against evil in our nation, do you think we'd have all the homelessness, drug abuse, poverty, hunger, prostitution, and insanity in our streets? I doubt it.

I'm sick of it. The reason our nation and world is in chaos today, teetering on the edge of total destruction is because so-called "Christians" have failed in their primary duty. Matthew 5:13, "You are the salt of the earth, but if the salt has lost his savor, how shall its savor be restored? It's no longer good for anything except to be thrown out and trampled under the feet of men."

This is what we've allowed to happen... and America is now a post-Christian nation. "Christianity" has become irrelevant. Good for nothing. The very Word of God has been thrown out and trampled under the feet of men, and we have allowed this to happen. Yes, Pastor, I'm talking to you — and all those lost souls you've spent your entire career serving up lies of omission to. You've taught them well. It's because of you that they don't think God Almighty has any place in the affairs of men and civil government. And so we no longer have civility and our government is treacherous tyranny.

It's doubtful that the man who called me to complain will ever read this message or hear it on the radio. From what I could gather, he only listens to the modern "praise choruses" on the "Christian Rock" stations. It's very sad. So many are so deluded because of our silent pulpits. But if you don't want to get near anything that could possibly be considered "political," you certainly have your choice of 99.9% of places that call themselves "churches" to attend and get a heaping helping of feel-good motivational speeches on any given Sunday.

Because we publish articles of real substance, covering the most vital matters facing our families, our nation and our world, Wisconsin Christian News is quite regularly condemned as being "too radical." I guess most people are expecting the typical milquetoast, wimpy, poetry and recipes, "feel good" motivational materials served up by the vast majority of our pastors and churches today. I can tell you that fewer than one in a hundred pastors will even allow Wisconsin Christian News in their buildings, because they fear someone may be offended when we say sodomy and baby-murder is wrong.

When people open up our newspaper, they're often shocked to see in-depth articles on what's really going on in this world. Serious matters. Don't get me wrong; we're not all doom and gloom — we offer the real hope of salvation in Christ — but we're not "cotton candy" vendors either. No sugar-coating here. We provide the truth. We offer substance and relevant information I believe all Christ-followers need to be aware of as they carry forward the Great Commission in this world. "Religious" people can't handle it. Pastors hate it. Even most businesses and ministries are too afraid to advertise in our newspaper, for fear of offending someone.

I'd like to contrast what we offer in Wisconsin Christian News with another so-called "Christian" newspaper from another state. While we struggle to meet the budget every month, this one is literally packed with expensive paid advertising. In their current issue, just in the first 15 pages there are nine full pages of nothing but ads. They offer plenty of positive, motivational teachings, some questionable new age psychology-based articles, and this month, a Christian College Guide, which appears to be another great opportunity for them to sell even more ads, which they did.

And in what I can only describe as a way for them to "stroke" the egos of the area pastors, they print full color pictures of pastors each month and publish their response to one absurd question a month. Examples of questions they've asked are: "What's the best concert you've ever been to?" "What is your favorite meal of all time?" "How old were you when you got your first car and what kind was it?" This month, they're asking, "Are you an early bird or a night owl, and why?"

I'm sorry to sound critical, but this is just such a waste, and clearly, I see no other reason for this particular feature except to, as I said, "stroke" the egos of the pastors who respond to the questions and get their pictures published. This is probably a great "door opener" too, to hopefully sell more ads to churches. Then they publish calendar listings for concerts and special events, along with classified ads.

They sell a lot of ads. Their paper is in full color throughout — something we've never been able to afford to do with Wisconsin Christian News. But for the life of me, I can't imagine why anyone would bother to read even a single page of it. It contains nothing of significance or substance.

Now, if I simply wanted to make money, I guess this would be a way to do that — but honestly, this is not "Christian news." This is nonsense. It offers nothing of substance at all. If I were only about making money, I'd much rather publish a Shopper's Guide or "Auto Seller." At least it would have some value and wouldn't be, in my opinion, mocking God.

I used to joke about how pastors and church-goers really only seem to want "poetry and recipes." Some time ago, I came across a small paper that was exactly that. It was put out for a while by a secular newspaper in one Wisconsin city, and I believe it was quarterly. And it truly was just poetry and recipes...and just about every single church in that city had an ad in it. It was definitely a money-maker, but I doubt anyone ever picked up more than one copy and it lasted less than a year.

I tell you all this to let you know that what we do here at Wisconsin Christian News is not easy. We get a lot of criticism and a lot of cruel and hateful phone calls, emails and letters. You might be shocked to know that most of the nasty comments come from those who consider themselves to be good, church-going Christians. On the other hand, we get amazing testimonies from people who find the Lord for the first time, or return to Him after many years away, after finding Wisconsin Christian News in a newspaper rack in a public place somewhere. Because we're relevant. We take on the tough issues. We don't mince words. We work hard to publish truth and have some of the best writers in the nation. Many have told us it's the only newspaper they read and the only media they feel they can trust. If you haven't seen it and would like a complimentary copy, just call and request one. I'll be happy to send it you.

Teacher Wins Settlement Over Refusing Pronoun Policy

WEST POINT, VA – The West Point School Board in Virginia has agreed to settle a wrongful termination lawsuit and pay $575,000 in damages and legal fees to high school French teacher Peter Vlaming, who was fired for refusing to refer to a female student by male pronouns citing his religious convictions.

Vlaming was fired in 2018 for refusing to comply with the school district superintendent's demand that he refer to a gender-confused student by pronouns inconsistent with the student's biological sex. He argued his sincerely held religious beliefs hold that gender is biologically determined and cannot be changed, which prohibit him from "intentionally lying" by using "pronouns that express an objectively untrue ideological message." While Vlaming agreed to call the student by her chosen name, he attempted an even further compromise by inviting the whole class to use new names to avoid using any pronouns. These efforts did not satisfy school officials and he was fired for "discrimination" on the basis of gender identity. He argued his dismissal violated his First Amendment free speech rights and religious expression.

In December 2023, the Virginia Supreme Court allowed Vlaming's lawsuit to move forward after it had been dismissed by a lower court. Virginia's High Court ruled the state's constitution "seeks to protect diversity of thought, diversity of speech, diversity of religion, and diversity of opinion," and so Vlaming's freedom of religion and expression had been violated. The ruling then paved the way for a settlement.

Under the terms of the settlement, the school board has cleared Vlaming's firing from his record which allows him to pursue a new teaching position with a clean employment history. In addition, separately from the settlement agreement, the school board has abandoned its pronoun policy to conform to Virginia's new education policies, which directs school personnel to refer to students only by the pronouns appropriate to the sex listed in the student's official record. Virginia's new policies make no allowance for schools to compel expression by stating that the First Amendment "guarantees religious freedom and prohibits the government from compelling speech in some contexts."

At least 1,131 U.S. school districts across the nation have adopted policies to support a child's preferred pronouns and some school districts have enacted secrecy policies to hide any child's gender confusion from parents.

Liberty Counsel Founder and Chairman Mat Staver said, "The First Amendment guarantees the right to speak and the right to not speak. Government schools cannot force teachers to endorse or engage in ideological viewpoints that violate their religious beliefs or freedom of speech. People have a right to live according to their conscience and religious beliefs."

"We shall have no real hope to survive the enemies arranged against us until we hang the traitors lurking among us."

I was sitting beside a lake recently, admiring the beautiful autumn sunset and thanking God for the serenity of that place, the beauty of His creation and the peace in that tiny part of the world I was sitting in. It was still warm out for this time of year in Wisconsin; an "Indian summer," but the falling leaves will soon give way to falling snow. And I believe the Holy Spirit spoke a single, simple word to me: "Remember."

"Remember this time of serenity, beauty and peace in this place, because it won't always be this way, and things can change so quickly. The rest of the world is in great turmoil now, so appreciate and remember this blessing. You have no idea what's coming quickly."

I can't imagine the devastation people in our Southeastern states are going through and in just a few weeks we have the November election. It's been said that this is the most important election in all of American history. I know they always say that, but this time, the outcome really is critical and will let us all know if our nation will be quickly cast down to hell or if God's patience and longsuffering will be extended just a little bit longer. Just a quick question: how is it that 2-5 million illegals registered to vote in November isn't "foreign election interference?" And those are just the illegals we know about that the Regime has already registered. The actual number is most certainly much higher.

I'm under no delusion that there will be mass repentance in America, or that suddenly, the modern American Church will finally take 2 Chronicles 7:14 seriously. Of course, some will — and a remnant already have humbled themselves, prayed, sought God's face, and turned from their wicked ways. But the majority of those who call themselves "Christians" have not. Like the rest of America, their hearts are hardened. They've chosen to believe the lies. They've chosen the broad and easy road rather than the narrow way. They've chosen apathy, luxury, comfort and ease. They preferred ignorance rather than truth. They're of their father, the devil, and are the ones who will hear, "Depart from Me, you workers of iniquity. I never knew you," as Jesus pronounces the final judgment.

Why do I believe that most don't understand the lateness of the hour? Isaiah 5:20-23, "Woe unto them that call evil good and good evil; that put darkness for light and light for darkness, that put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter! Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight! Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink; which justify the wicked for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him!" Read the rest of Isaiah 5 if you want to know what happens next.

We were so greatly blessed in this land of the free and home of the brave, but with our luxury, comfort and ease came complacency. Though many watchmen on the wall were sent to warn us, few heeded the warnings and now this most blessed of all nations has been cursed with falsehood and lies, sexual depravity, unjust and tyrannical rulers, and though we may not see it with our human eyes, the blood of the innocent floods every street in every neighborhood in every city and town across this land.

Ronald Reagan once said, "If we ever forget that we are One Nation Under God, then we will be a nation gone under." The Democratic party, long ago, exchanged God for Satan in their party platform. And while the Republican party gives lip service to the notion of "religious liberty," they have, this year, disavowed all support of the right to life for the unborn. I'm sorry, but you can't expect me to believe you're serious about your Christian faith if you refuse to adamantly defend and protect the very lives of precious babies.

Once again, it's a case of "the lesser of two evils." On one hand, if Kamala Harris is selected, along with Tim Walz, we have an immediate straight-line expressway to full on Communism. There's absolutely no doubt whatsoever about that. It will be immediate and drastic. Harris is the daughter of a Marxist college professor. No one questions that. That's the ideology she was raised with in her "middle class home." The United States of America will be immediately turned over to the New World Order, under Globalist control. Their first order of business will be to confiscate guns and abolish the second amendment. Harris has already stated that's essential for her.

Then, we're talking crushing tax burdens, forcing even a majority of Americans into homelessness. Bankruptcy for countless corporations and Mom and Pop businesses. We're talking the further weaponization of the healthcare system and more purposeful depopulation of the "useless eaters." Add to that, "re-education" centers for adults and increased brainwashing in our public schools and colleges for children and young people.

The end of affordable energy, strict travel restrictions, and of course, federally-funded abortions up to — and after — the time of birth. You may as well add federally funded euthanasia and suicide, because if they aren't able to kill enough babies prior to or at birth, or enough people with their mandated jabs and the poisoning of our air and food supplies, they'll be happy to pay to end your life when you just can't take any more of their tyranny and oppression.

Of course, the insanity of "transgenderism" with an endless array of sexual "identities" will only grow more intense and idiotic and the majority will be forced to bow down to the cult of the growing minority of individuals with "gender dysphoria" — a condition of mental illness that is cultivated, nurtured and encouraged by the radical left. Not to mention the acceptance and celebration of "minor attracted persons."

Then there is America's place on the world stage. There's no doubt that the US Dollar will become extinct as we join a new, One-World digital currency. Our military will be placed under the control of a Globalist government. The hated Christian White Male will be targeted in every possible way by every traitorous government agency. America as we've known it, will be forever gone.

On the other hand, if Trump is allowed to take office, you can be assured there will be no "peaceful transfer of power." If that's what's been decided, then you can rest assured that every possible form of chaos, anarchy, discord, lawlessness, pandemonium, turmoil and mobocracy is, even now, being planned — to rain down utter destruction in every city and small town nationwide. There will be nowhere to hide.

I have no doubt that Obama's "private army," which he's boasted of so often, is already training. Then, add in the millions of illegal enemy combatants that have already been settled into this country under the Regime, just waiting for the call on their government-issued cell phones to launch the attack. There will be no escape. It will be open season on all American citizens.

Trump will have no other option than to declare martial law to maintain some semblance of law and order, which of course, will then give the subversive mainstream media even more opportunity to openly declare him a fascist.

Trump has an ambitious list of things he'd like to accomplish, but if you think the Left — and those of his own party — are going to stop the attacks they've been piling on him for the past eight years, you'd be wrong.

He wants to seal the border, stop the invasion and begin deporting the criminal illegals already here. He wants to bring energy independence to our nation and end the nonsensical "Green New Deal" and all-electric mandates. Also on his list: end inflation, bring manufacturing jobs back to America, provide tax cuts, defend the Constitution and bill of rights, restore peace in Europe and the Middle East, set up an "Iron Dome" defense system — like Israel has — here in this country and rebuild our rotting cities.

His plan includes strengthening our military, keeping the US Dollar as the world reserve currency, cutting federal funding for any school pushing critical race theory, radical gender ideology and other inappropriate racial, sexual or political content on our children. He wants to keep men out of women's sports, secure our elections and unite the country.

This all sounds great, but bear in mind, that as he struggles to achieve these goals, he's going to be fighting for his life — against the Democrats, Republicans and the Global Deep State. Their attacks will be unrelenting, and as I already stated, the country will be in turmoil like we've never seen before because of the mass violence that will certainly be everywhere...orchestrated by the demonic Left.

Of course, that's assuming Donald Trump makes it to November 5th, and then to January 20th. In addition to never-ending witch hunts by a weaponized justice department, FBI and CIA, he's already survived two assassination attempts so far, and it's been reported that there are now five separate teams of trained assassins hunting him, along with the nation of Iran. He's also been warned that these professional killers are armed with surface-to-air missiles, which could be launched from anywhere on the ground and aimed at his campaign jet as it leaves the ground.

And as I write this, I'm told that the Secret Service, which failed in its duties to protect Trump so miserably on July 13th, has only gotten worse. Like so many other things, we have the traitor Mayorkas to blame for this too.

I must admit: Trump is an enigma to me. Why would he want this job in the first place? Why is he enduring so much personal trauma, for a goal that, even if he manages to accomplish, will leave him in an impossible situation with constant attacks for at least the next four years — or until he's killed?

And I must also wonder why he went along with the scam-demic of COVID. He most certainly had to know COVID was a psy-op, Fauci was a criminal and the jab was deadly. Why did he continue to fund Planned Parenthood? Why has he been so supportive of the LGBTQP+ agenda? He did do many things I agreed with during his first term, but others just left me wondering, "what in the world??" Two things are clear... Harris is an express train to immediate Communism; and Trump is an enigma.

Today we stand at the brink of World War 3 — for real this time. We've come close before, but it's never been this close. America has faced threats from enemies many times in the past, but never so badly from within, and the thing that enrages me the most is that our own government has imported these violent criminals, intent on our destruction and has made us pay for it. And we should note that while the federal government has never been on the side of the American people, there's never before been a time in history that it's been this corrupt and traitorous...with every 3-letter agency now the avowed enemy of us all.

Americans just want to be left alone. We want to be able to go about our daily lives, raise our families in peace, pay our bills and not be crushed to death by sadistic tax burdens. We want to raise our kids ourselves, not have their health, their hearts, minds and souls stolen by Big Brother. We don't want to be forced to agree that 2 plus 2 equals five or that evil is good and good is evil. We want an end to lawlessness, and we want to see justice prevail. We just want to be able to go sit beside a lake sometimes, breathe in the crisp, fall air and admire the grand beauty of God's handiwork of Creation and thank Him for the blessings of peace and tranquility.

We don't want war, we don't want injustice, we don't want "gay" everything. We don't want the murder of babies to be "normal" anymore. We don't want Leftist and "transgender" rage and vengeance. We don't want racial hatred. And it would be nice if we could trust those we've hired to lead us.

But right now, I'd urge you to enjoy what you have. In a few weeks, I dare say things are going to look a lot different than they do today. And no matter what happens, there is no happy ending to the story of America in 2024.

Police Officer Spends $150 On Cold Weather Supplies For Homeless Man

Today's good news story comes from Gwinnett County, Georgia.

In a heartening display of compassion and generosity, a Gwinnett County police officer is receiving widespread praise on social media for his selfless act towards a homeless man facing bitter cold nights. The touching incident was captured on the officer's body camera, showcasing the extraordinary lengths Sgt. Todd Heller went to help someone in need.

The video begins with Sgt. Heller approaching the homeless man, who holds a sign that reads, "Waiting on a blessing," on the side of the road. In a simple yet profound gesture, Heller asked if the man wanted a blanket. The two exchanged a handshake, and Heller warmly invited the man into his patrol car.

As they drove to Walmart, Sgt. Heller took the time to review the upcoming week's overnight weather, revealing temperatures as low as 16 degrees Fahrenheit. Heller spent over $150 of his own money to purchase essential cold-weather provisions for the homeless man. The thoughtful items included an insulated sleeping bag, toe warmers, thick socks, and more.

During their interaction, Heller even offered canned goods, which the grateful man declined, saying, "You did enough, man." The touching exchange continued in the Walmart parking lot, where Heller bid the man farewell, expressing well wishes for the future.

"You were waiting on a blessing, right?" Heller said. "God blessed you today. You just didn't know it was gonna be me."
