March 2024

Happy Spring to all!

I don't know about ya'll, but I truly do enjoy starting to hear the birds singing, watching the daffodils, (what we used to call easter lilies), bloom. Of course, we here in the hills of West Virginia look forward to our spring dosage of "greens" and of course a delicacy we call "ramps". Wish all of you could be here for a "mess" of greens and cornbread! Oh well, I guess we had better move on.

First, I sincerely want to remind you, and myself, just how blessed we are as His people! Those who are the born again, blood bought, Spirit filled new creations in Christ have a beautiful future and eternity awaiting us! We must keep our eyes on Christ! Peter walked on the water as long as he kept his eyes (faith) on Jesus! He only began to "drown" (sink) when he lost his faith! I promise you that we need to stay close to our Saviour because we are about to witness all hell break loose in America! (Ps. 9:17)

Let's look at the facts and be mature enough in God's Word to understand that America is on her death bed eat up with the "cancer" of sin! The once blessed, strong, healthy and robust nation she used to be is a hollowed out shell of her former self. Hollowed out by the putrid filth we have "consumed" for many decades! The filth of sin that we see "oozing" from the every pore of society, even the so-called churches, is a natural result of a rotting dying nation. Folks, I realize this is not a pleasant truth! BUT IT IS THE TRUTH!!

Let's stand together in the strength of God's Word! Let's pray for one another! We are more than conquerors through Christ our Lord and Saviour! (Rom. 8:37)

We love all of you! Help us if you feel lead to and can, to keep Call to Decision going!

FAIL: Alleged Intruder Hospitalized After Bringing Hammer to a Gunfight

An alleged intruder armed with a hammer was airlifted to a hospital Monday after a Grayson County, Texas, homeowner shot him around 4:30 p.m.

ABC 10 reported that the suspect allegedly “forced his way into the home.”

The Grayson County Sheriff’s Office indicated that “the homeowner attempted to get the man to leave and was struck by the hammer.”

The homeowner responded by shooting the alleged intruder and then calling 911.

KXII noted that the alleged intruder was transported to a hospital “by air ambulance” after being shot. On Tuesday, he was critical but stable.

Breitbart News reported that an alleged intruder attempted to enter a St. Louis building from a fire escape around 4:00 a.m. Wednesday and was shot by a building occupant.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch noted that responding officers found the suspect deceased on the scene.

Georgia Bill Makes Property Owners Liable for Injuries in Gun-Free Zones Excellent move!

Georgia House Bill 1364 makes property owners liable if a legal concealed carrier is harmed while barred from being armed for self-defense on the owner's property.

HB 1364 says, "Any lawful weapons carrier who is prohibited from carrying... and who is injured... shall have a cause of action against the person, business or other entity that owns or legally controls such property," according to 11 Alive.

The bill is sponsored by State Rep. Martin Momtahan (R).

Momtahan explained his motivation for introducing the legislation.

He said, "All we want to make sure is, if you're in the store or anywhere and it has a 'no gun' sign, then that store needs to understand they have absolute custodial care of that person [who's denied the ability to be armed]."

The text of HB 1364 clarifies that any posting that bars legal gun owners from being armed for self-defense must be accompanied by signage that makes clear the land owner understands his custodial duties:

Any public notice posted on a property that includes language which provides that weapons are prohibited on such property shall also contain language citing this Code section and providing that any lawful weapons carrier who is prohibited from carrying his or her weapon, including a concealed weapon, while on such property shall be under the absolute custodial care of the

Life In America Has Never Been More Unaffordable Than It Is Right Now

September 26, 2023 by Michael

Our standard of living is being systematically destroyed, but for a lot of years many Americans didn't fully understand what was taking place because it was happening so slowly. But now we have reached a stage where the purchasing power of our money is collapsing and the cost of living has become exceedingly painful. Thanks to our rapidly rising cost of living, the middle class is becoming "the impoverished class", and the poor are increasingly being pushed out into the streets. If we do not find a way to turn these trends around, it won't be too long before we have tremendous societal turmoil on our hands.

Earlier today, I came across an article about a woman that found a receipt from Burger King that was dated August 10, 1986.

At that time you could buy a Whopper for just $1.54.

Today, that same Whopper will cost you \$6.79...

A woman has been left stunned after discovering a retro Burger King receipt from the 1980s which reveals the staggering price increases that the fast food chain has implemented over the past four decades.

US-based Liza took to social media to share the receipt after her mother found it in a box in the garage while remodeling her home.

The faded paper from the fast food chain dates back to August 10, 1986, and lists three Whopper burgers purchased for $4.62 – which works out at $1.54 each.

A single Whopper burger currently costs $6.79 in today's money – over four times the price listed on the vintage receipt.

In other words, if you had $6.79 back then, you could buy four whoppers and you would still have money left over.

This is what inflation does.

It destroys our purchasing power.

Another woman named Melanie that makes 34 dollars an hour is so stressed financially that she literally tries to make one loaf of rye bread last her for the entire week...

“What I've started doing is I buy a loaf of rye bread, and I work really hard to keep that one loaf of rye bread lasting me the whole week. And I eat peanut butter, so I'll eat peanut butter toast whenever I'm hungry.”

In the old days, if you were making 34 dollars an hour you were living the high life.

But now most people making 34 dollars an hour are just barely scraping by from month to month.

Of course it isn't just food that has become absurdly expensive.

At this point, homes in the U.S. have never been more unaffordable than they are right now.

The following was recently posted on Twitter by The Kobeissi Letter...

Inflation adjusted home prices are now 85% above their average dating back to 1900.

Even after accounting for inflation, home prices have never been more expensive than they are now.

In fact, inflation adjusted home prices are now 20% above their 2008 peak, the previous all time high.

The median home now sells for an alarming 530% of the median annual income.

Meanwhile, the median house payment is now a record 49% of median PRE-TAX income.

Affordability has never been worse.

We have never seen anything like this in the entire history of our country.

Since the beginning of 2019, the median price of a home in the U.S. has risen by more than a hundred thousand dollars...

In fact, comparing present prices to levels before the virus panic, St. Louis Fed numbers show a median priced U.S. home rose from $313,000 in the beginning of 2019 to $416,000 today.

Rental prices have gone completely nuts as well.

As I discussed last week, the median asking rent in the United States is now over $2,000 a month.

Over the past couple of years we have seen unprecedented rent hikes, and vast numbers of renters have been getting the boot.

In fact, we are seeing a tsunami of evictions in the Los Angeles area right now...

With COVID-era protections gone, the number of renters facing eviction in Los Angeles continues to climb by the thousands each month.

From February through the end of August, approximately 50,000 eviction notices were filed by landlords in the city, according to figures released on Monday by the L.A. Controller's Office.

A spokesperson said 96% of them involve non-payment of rent, and landlords were owed $186.5 million collectively.

So where will all these people go?

If they are young enough, perhaps they can live with their parents.

But many will not have that option.

Up to this point in 2023, homelessness in the United States has been rising at the fastest pace ever recorded, and a lot more Americans will find themselves without a home between now and the end of the year.

Meanwhile, those that are still scraping by will find it harder and harder to make ends meet.

The average rate of interest on our credit card balances has risen from about 16 percent in February 2022 to more than 22 percent today.

As a result, an increasing number of Americans find themselves unable to keep up with their payments, and it is being reported that credit card losses are rising at the quickest rate since the last financial crisis...

Credit card companies are racking up losses at the fastest pace in almost 30 years, outside of the Great Financial Crisis, according to Goldman Sachs.

Credit card losses bottomed in September 2021, and while initial increases were likely reversals from stimulus, they have been rapidly rising since the first quarter of 2022. Since that time, it's an increasing rate of losses only seen in recent history during the recession of 2008.

It is far from over, the firm predicts.

More Americans are going bankrupt as well.

In fact, the number of bankruptcy cases in August 2023 was 18 percent higher than it was in August 2022.

Millions upon millions of Americans have been turning to debt in order to keep up with the cost of living, but as economic conditions deteriorate financial institutions are starting to get much tighter with their money.

So we are moving into a time when U.S. consumers will find it much more difficult to take on new debt...

Nearly 60% of the respondents in a New York Fed consumer expectations survey said it's harder to get credit cards, mortgages and other loans than it was a year ago. It was the highest level since the New York Fed started the data series back in 2013.

Another Fed survey of loan officers reveals their fears aren't unfounded. Banks reported that lending standards tightened across all consumer loan categories and all categories of residential real estate (RRE) loans. Meanwhile, the number of banks reporting tighter standards for credit cards rose by 36%.

Banks have also significantly tightened standards for business loans.

This is a recipe for disaster.

That is definitely true.

Without a doubt, this is certainly a recipe for disaster.

But there is no going back now.

In fact, the rising price of oil is going to cause enormous inflationary pressures throughout our entire economic system in the months ahead.

On Tuesday, a senior market analyst at OANDA warned that it appears that "nothing is going to get in the way of this oil price rally"...

"It looks like nothing is going to get in the way of this oil price rally," said Edward Moya, senior market analyst at OANDA, in emailed comments on Tuesday. "Energy traders know a bullish trend when they see one and it will take a lot more than a strong dollar, softer Russian ban, and weakening demand, to disrupt this rally."*

When the price of oil reaches 100 dollars a barrel, that will be painful, but we can handle that.

But the chief executive of Continental Resources is projecting that the price of oil could eventually reach 150 dollars a barrel...

That's Doug Lawler, chief executive of Continental Resources, the shale-drilling giant controlled by billionaire Harold Hamm, telling Bloomberg News on Monday that crude prices are set to remain elevated and could press to the $120- to $150-a-barrel range without new production.

More price pressure is coming, he said, unless policies are put in place to encourage more output.

If the price of oil reaches 150 dollars a barrel and stays there, it will be an unmitigated disaster for our economy, and the cost of just about everything will jump substantially.

That is because just about everything that we buy and sell has to be transported.

We need cheap energy in order to have a high standard of living, but unfortunately the era of cheap energy is coming to an abrupt ending, and that means that none of our lives will ever be the same again.

I kept warning my readers that a lot of the long-term trends that I have been writing about would catch up with us eventually, and now that time has arrived.

So enjoy the current economic conditions while you still can, because they will soon go from bad to worse.

The Truth About The Economy That The Mainstream Media Is Not Telling You

By Michael Snyder/Economic Collapse Blog December 15, 2023

If it seems to you that the economic headlines that we are being fed by the mainstream media are completely and utterly disconnected from reality, you are definitely not alone. They tell us that inflation is under control, but I was just at the grocery store today and I could hardly believe the prices.

They tell us that unemployment is "low", but large companies are laying off workers in droves. And they tell us that things are getting better for the middle class, but the truth is that by mid-2024 the vast majority of Americans will have less money than they did in 2019...

The majority of Americans have burned through their excess savings piled up during the COVID-19 pandemic, and in the coming months, JPMorgan says it is likely that almost everyone will be worse off financially than they were in 2019.

In a Thursday note, the bank's top stock strategist Marko Kolanovic said 80% of consumers, a group that accounts for nearly two-thirds of consumption, has already depleted any savings cushion they may have built during lockdowns.

"It is likely that only the top 1% of consumers by income will be better off than before the pandemic," Kolanovic wrote, pointing to the growing signs of credit card and auto loan delinquencies, as well as Chapter 11 filings.

If almost all of us are getting poorer, how is that good news?

Of course the money that we still have in our bank accounts continues to lose even more value with each passing day.

An absolutely outstanding article that was just posted on Schiff Gold analyzes how much a basket of groceries that Kevin bought in the 1990 movie "Home Alone" would cost today...

Kevin bought a basket full of groceries including a half-gallon of milk, orange juice, Wonder Bread, a Stouffer's frozen turkey dinner, toilet paper, Snuggle dryer sheets, Tide liquid laundry detergent, plastic wrap, Kraft macaroni and cheese, and a bag of army men. He paid a grand total of $19.83 with a $1 off coupon for the orange juice.

In 2022, that same basket of groceries would have cost around $44.40 based on a shopping trip by a West Virginia mother. That's a 123.9% increase. (Keep in mind prices vary somewhat depending on the store and location.)

This year, Kevin would have to fork out a whopping $72.28 for his provisions at a Chicago store. That's another 62.8% increase in just one year. Since 1990, the price of Kevin's groceries has gone up over 264%.

So how in the world can they possibly claim that inflation is "low"?

It is almost as if we are living in Bizarro World.

At this point, it would cost the typical U.S. household 3.4 million dollars to live the American Dream over the course of a lifetime...

The "American Dream" costs about $3.4 million to achieve over the course of a lifetime, from getting married to saving for retirement, according to a recent analysis from financial site Investopedia.

Meanwhile, median lifetime earnings for the typical U.S. worker stand at $1.7 million, earlier research from the Georgetown University has found.

Such figures underline the financial pressures that many families face trying to afford a middle-class life as expenses like child care, college tuition and buying a home continue to climb. The Investopedia analysis tallies the average cost of achieving other aspects traditionally associated with the American Dream, such as owning a house and raising two children to age 18.

If you are like most Americans, you are never even going to come close to earning enough money to live a middle class lifestyle.

That is why so many people out there have given up.

In this economic environment, just hanging on to a decent job is an accomplishment.

This week, we learned that General Motors will be laying off approximately 900 employees...

General Motors' Cruise on Thursday announced internally that it will lay off 900 employees, or 24% of its workforce, the company confirmed to CNBC.

The layoffs, which primarily affected commercial operations and related corporate functions, are the latest turmoil for the robotaxi startup and come one day after Cruise dismissed nine "key leaders" for the company's response to an Oct. 2 accident in which a pedestrian was dragged 20 feet by a Cruise self-driving car after being struck by another vehicle.

Meanwhile, Ford is cutting production of the F-150 Lightning pickup in half...

Ford Motor will cut planned production of its all-electric F-150 Lightning pickup roughly in half next year, marking a major reversal after the automaker significantly increased plant capacity for the electric vehicle in 2023.

The new production plans call for average volume of around 1,600 F-150 Lightnings a week at Ford's Rouge Electric Vehicle Center in Dearborn, Michigan, starting in January, according to a source familiar with the decision. The automaker most recently planned to produce roughly 3,200 of the vehicles on average per week.

They want us to purchase electric vehicles, but what they don't tell us is that maintenance and repairs are insanely expensive...

Lucas Turner was driving his 2014 Infiniti hybrid when its check engine light made its annoying appearance on the scene, according to KPHO-TV.

Not good, but with fewer than 70,000 miles on the vehicle, he was not expecting the bill would be a whopper.

Wrong.

"They called me and said, 'Oh, I've got bad news, Mr. Turner. You need a new hybrid battery and it's going to cost $18,000 for the battery and another $2,000 to have it installed.'

No thank you.

I could never see myself buying an electric vehicle, and there are tens of millions of other Americans that feel the exact same way.

Switching to another industry, Hasbro just announced that it will be laying off more than a thousand workers...

Toy giant Hasbro is laying off more than a thousand workers and closing its office in Providence, Rhode Island.

Why would a toy company be laying off so many workers just before Christmas? Shouldn't this be a boom time for them? Some people suspect it is directly due to their partnership with Disney, a brand which has become toxic for many Americans in recent years.

People aren't exactly lining up to buy toys linked to the last Indiana Jones movie or the latest offering of the Marvels, both of which were total duds at the box office.

When a major toy company is laying off workers even before the holiday season is over, that is a really bad sign for the economy.

Of course things in Europe are even worse.

At this point, it appears that Europeans are facing "a continent-wide recession"...

The latest GDP figures show that the eurozone contracted in the third quarter and looks like it will do the same in the last three months of the year falling into a continent-wide recession, Oxford Economics said in a note on December 8.

"Final figures confirmed eurozone GDP contracted 0.1% in the third quarter. What's more, the detailed breakdown showed the European economy has no engines of growth at the moment. Although private consumption posted a small gain over the previous quarter, the near-term outlook still looks dire, and with both investment and exports unlikely to provide much momentum, the economy looks set to slide into recession in the fourth quarter," Oxford Economics said.

And on the other side of the globe, we are being told that "China's banking system is collapsing"...

China's banking system is collapsing, and the real estate crisis in the country could end up wiping out $4 trillion from its financial system, according to veteran investor Kyle Bass.

In an interview with Andrew Ross Sorkin on CNBC on Monday, the Hayman Capital Management CIO pointed to China's property sector, which has been reeling in recent years as debts from major property owners sour and some firms default on their bonds. The real estate crisis has left enough empty homes in China to house 3 billion people, a former top Chinese official said, and the flood of unused supply will generate huge financial losses in the real estate sector.

So don't believe the hype.

The mainstream media would like us to believe that 2024 will be a wonderful year for the economy.

But the truth is that economic conditions have already been deteriorating all around us, and I am extremely concerned about what is coming during the year ahead.

We have been propping up our standard of living for years by engaging in the greatest debt binge in the history of the world, but now that bubble has started to burst.

A tremendous amount of discomfort is ahead of us, but the mainstream media will continue to insist that every jolt of pain is simply a bump on the road to endless prosperity.

America's Fiat Money Gestapo: The Untold History of the Secret Service

By Joshua D. Glawson

There is an untold story in American monetary history. Some are reluctant even to discuss it.

I'm referring to the U.S. Secret Service's very own role in the destruction of sound money in America.

As constitutional, sound money in the form of physical gold and silver coins – whether minted privately or not – became an annoying impediment to expanding the size and power of the federal government, central planners began circulating unbacked paper proxies and formed a Gestapo-like police agency to enforce the scheme.

Founded in 1865, toward the tail end of the American Civil War, the Secret Service originated as a branch of the U.S. Treasury Department.

The primary job of this federal police force was to prevent others from counterfeiting the U.S. currency, which had just been nationalized through acts of Congress via the National Currency Act of 1863 and the Coinage Act of 1864.

Together, these acts formed what are commonly known as the National Banking Acts of 1863 and 1864.

These Washington, D.C. laws imposed taxes with a levy court system and implemented direct taxation. This led to the country's first income tax. The government also strengthened the establishment of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), which had conveniently begun operation in 1862. Conjointly, these propped up the new federal fiat currency system.

From around 1837 through part of the Civil War, currency issuance and banking in America had been directed by a more decentralized network of states and free banking institutions. These entities issued banknotes that could be cashed in for standardized gold or silver coins or traded for goods and services.

During the Civil War, however, both sides issued their own banknotes to help fund their respective war efforts, often unbacked by the two monetary metals.

The Union pushed forth greenback fiat currency in Demand Notes and United States Notes. At the same time, the Confederates printed fiat greybacks in the forms of Confederate Dollars and Confederate Treasury Notes.

The number of fiat dollars in a bank and region in the new era would be largely based on population rather than gold and silver reserves, which is one reason the Union continued to encourage immigration both for fiat monetary support and war efforts.

The Union pushed to expand American territories through these Acts to increase population and issuance of government fiat money.

Since the Union and Congress sought to impose a federal fiat legal tender currency system that did not rely on tangible value and voluntarism, they needed enforcement of those laws. Those supporting laws included income taxes and establishing the IRS.

The war, economic strife, and competition between currencies created various types of “counterfeit” currency.

Government officials made haughty claims that one in three fractional gold or silver coins at that time were counterfeit and did not contain their original gold or silver weight. By decreasing the amount of gold or silver in a coin, a counterfeiter could turn a profit.

Yet, these government hypocrites had no qualms about mandating that unbacked fiat currency must be considered legally equal to gold and silver coinage. Nor did they object to the illicit profit this enabled the central government to rake in.

Sadly, the U.S. Supreme Court notoriously affirmed this devious scheme when deciding the “Legal Tender Cases,” considered by many legal scholars (including present-day Justices on the high court) to have been wrongly decided.

As such, the government changed the definition of money and citizens could henceforth be compelled to accept non-redeemable paper as equal to gold or silver coins.

On April 14, 1865, President Abraham Lincoln signed legislation establishing the Secret Service to combat counterfeit money – the non-government type, that is. Later that same day, Lincoln was assassinated, and he died on April 15.

From 1865 to 1901, the Secret Service’s main mission was to bust private counterfeiting operations. In 1881, President James Garfield was assassinated – interestingly, not too long after publicly advocating for a return to the gold standard.

Then, in 1901, with the assassination of President William McKinley, and under the new presidency of Theodore Roosevelt, the Secret Service was given the additional task of defending U.S. presidents. (McKinley’s assassination occurred a year after he signed the Gold Standard Act of 1900, which halted bimetallism by diminishing the monetary role of silver.)

The Secret Service grew from its original role of helping to ramrod a new fiat currency standard into a much larger police force that also protects the U.S. Presidents.

A full 50 years before the Christmas Eve passage of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, Congress had already set in motion a plan to rob our nation's monetary system of its gold and silver, slip a fiat currency into circulation, promote fractional reserve banking, stamp out state and private banknotes, strengthen the IRS, and spawn the Secret Service to help enforce it all.

The solution is to return to a free market for money – a system of competition where gold and silver are permitted to circulate alongside other forms of payment – and to remove government force from the equation.

May the best currency win.

Normal isn't coming back.. So get off your knees and resist.. Because I assure you, what they have planned is far worse than anything they've already done..

ON NOVEMBER 22, 1963, JOHN F. KENNEDY, THE 35TH PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, WAS ASSASSINATED BY THE CIA WHILE RIDING IN A PRESIDENTIAL MOTORCADE THROUGH DEALEY PLAZA IN DALLAS, TEXAS. THE CIA THEN POPULARIZED THE TERM "CONSPIRACY THEORIES", TO DISCREDIT TRUTH TELLERS, AND HAVE WEAPONIZED THE TERM EVER SINCE.

U.S. Part of a 'Cash Bonanza' That's Paying Illegals to Cross the Border: Report

Suzanne Bowdey

February 16, 2024

Is the U.S. bankrolling our own border invasion? That's what an explosive new report from The Epoch Times suggests. While Americans struggle to pay for shelter, medical care, food, and schooling for the migrants who've been bussed to major cities, we may also be footing the bill for their journey here. "We're actually funding our own border crisis," the Center for Immigration Studies' Todd Bensman warned. And most taxpayers have no clue.

While the Biden administration has been all too willing to throw open the gates to illegal crossers, their biggest contribution to the crisis is through the U.N., where this president has been funneling hundreds of millions of dollars to agencies sabotaging our border. The International Office for Migration (IOM), for instance, which is part of the U.N., had been raking in about a half-billion dollars before 2021. Now, alarmed experts say, that funding "has skyrocketed" to an eye-popping $1.3 billion in 2023 — double what it was under Donald Trump.

Why is that a problem? Because that money, investigations have shown, is being handed out directly to migrants who want to cross the border illegally. "People who might not have taken the risk to travel to the U.S., because they were worried about food or safety now have help," Bensman points out. "That help," The Epoch Times notes, "comes in the form of prepaid debit cards, food, water, shelter, medical care, and transportation." In most cases, these migrants are "directly" receiving cash — "what the U.N. emergency manual calls 'cash in envelopes.'"

Bensman went to Mexico to see with his own two eyes whether this was actually happening. In 2021, his tweet of migrants in long lines for U.N. debit cards went viral. "The IOM workers said a ... family of four gets about $800 a month." Most of this, he told The Epoch Times, "[is] provided by, ultimately, the United States taxpayer."

They have money — and something just as dangerous: motivation. They know the border is wide open, Bensman points out. "They say, 'Well, you know, we're coming now because Biden's letting us in.'" The reality is, "People respond to the signals that are being sent," Ian Mehlman, spokesman for the Federation for American Immigration Reform (FAIR), argued. "If they believe that there is a good chance that they're going to be able to get to the United States and be allowed to remain here, then they will go through all the things that they have to go through."

Meanwhile, people tracking the money say that a majority of it comes from the State Department's Bureau of Population, Refugees, and Migration, which, ironically, is responsible for processing and resettling people requesting refugee status. But, as experts point out, millions of dollars are going to migrants — most of whom don't qualify as refugees — long before they step foot on American soil.

All of this is propped up by the U.N.'s own efforts, which is siphoning off donations from U.S. taxpayers to overrun their own borders. One program is "allocate[ing] $372 million in 'cash and vouchers' and 'multipurpose cash assistance' during 2024 for 624,300 migrants — the population of Detroit — in Central and South America who are headed for the U.S. border."

With America's help, Bensman wants people to know, the U.N. is "aiding and abetting mass migration." Just last month, the IOM announced that it's upping the ante to $7.9 billion to "[realize] migration's promise as a force for good throughout the world." IOM's director general, Amy Pope, in her plea to member nations, even claimed that the kind of migration the U.S. is experiencing, "when well-managed, is a major contributor to global prosperity and progress."

She's also been speaking that into the ear of Joe Biden for years, since, as The Epoch Times points out, she served as the president's senior advisor on migration and as deputy Homeland Security advisor to Barack Obama. It's no coincidence that the person incentivizing these mass border crossings has direct ties to the White House, where she's used her perch at the U.N. to extract more money from the overly generous United States.

Raising even more eyebrows, the report points to a stunning number of political appointees who share Pope's radical views. That alone, experts say, shows that the crisis is intentionally "engineered."

Illegal immigration "is a big business for the Biden administration," Mehlman points out. "There's no question that we saw a vast increase in migration to the United States, starting from the day that Joe Biden took office. ... It's happening because people are allowing it to happen. It is being facilitated every step along the way." Largely, Bensman shakes his head, because of these giveaways, this U.S.-backed "cash bonanza."

The U.N. seems to believe that "people should be able to move to any country they desire," regardless of the laws they're violating, or the havoc they wreak on those societies, or the devastation they do to the nations they're fleeing. "If the incentive is to leave rather than to reform and change things where you are," Bensman warns, "then those failed societies continue."

Republicans, and a surprising number of Democrats, realize that this self-funded invasion is destroying our country from within. They've played hardball on the Ukraine bill, impeached Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas in a historic vote, and, most recently, threatened to cut his salary if DHS's reports on the exploding border numbers continue to be late. But the reality is a harsh one: Americans are unknowingly fueling the crisis.

"The United Nations is using our own tax dollars against us," Rep. Lance Gooden (R-Texas) fumed in January, "and U.S. policymakers can no longer stand by while elites in the U.N. actively financing an invasion of our sovereign territory."

And frankly, as outrageous as it is that Americans are unknowingly paying people to break our laws, it's who we may be paying that should frighten people. An open border, Family Research Council President Tony Perkins argued, is an open invitation to terror. With 300 suspects of the

Terror Watch List already captured on their way across, who knows how many slipped through — or worse, were simply released into our communities? “We may never know until they are encountered by law enforcement at a later date,” a Homeland Security agent anonymously told The Daily Caller. “Very well after it’s too late.”

Judge rules parents can't opt students out of LGBTQ+ curriculum

By Scripps News Baltimore,

LGBTQ+ books

A federal judge has ruled against a group of parents, saying they have no fundamental right to opt their elementary school-aged children out of reading books in class with LGBTQ+ characters.

Last year Montgomery County Public Schools in Maryland incorporated the books into its English Language Arts curriculum.

Supporters claim the books promote a diverse and inclusive environment for all students.

Initially, parents could choose to opt their children out of reading and learning about the material.

In March, however, the school board instituted a new policy stripping parents of that right.

Under the revised policy schools no longer were required to provide parents with advanced notice of when their children would be reading the books.

The decision sparked major push back from many — including some religious advocacy groups, like the Council on American-Islamic Relations (CAIR).

After heated debate before the board of education, three families from different religious backgrounds sued the school system.

They alleged the policy violated not only state law, but their free speech and substantive due process rights, under the First and Fourteenth Amendments.

On Thursday U.S. District Judge Deborah L. Boardman disagreed, declining the parents' request for an injunction.

"The court concludes the plaintiffs' asserted due process right to direct their children's upbringing by opting out of a public-school curriculum that conflicts with their religious views is not a fundamental right," Boardman wrote in a 60-page opinion.

CAIR responded to the ruling by issuing this statement.

"As the school year begins, we remain committed to vocally advocating for families who simply want their children to attend English class without being forced to discuss and affirm sensitive concepts that would normally arise in sex education courses. Until the opt-out is restored, families plan to pursue every available legal means to protect their rights — including but not limited to targeted legal action, continued interfaith protests, and the release of additional internal MCPS documents."

Attorneys representing the parents have already filed a notice of appeal.

‘Dream Scenario for Pedophiles’: Austin School District Approves Curriculum Giving Graphic Sex Tips to Kids

By Shane Trejo

A powerful school board governing the entire city of Austin, TX has approved new sexual education standards that detractors are calling a “dream scenario for pedophiles.” It is set to teach kids that there are 50 genders, give instructions on how to apply condoms for sex acts, and offer tips on how to perform graphic sexual positions.

The Austin Independent School District (AISD) approved the standards unanimously last month. At the meeting where it was approved, over 100 people made their voices heard about the standards. Pro-child advocates faced off with depraved LGBT activists, who are delighted about the success of their efforts to corrupt the souls of the youth.

One page from the new sex ed standards will give children tips about the best way to have anal sex. It tells children to eschew myths about anal sex, and that “if you get ready the right way, it doesn’t need to hurt and won’t cause health issues,” adding that “many people enjoy it!”

Another page from the new sex ed standards encourages children to receive birth control and abortions without their parents’ consent.

“After you turn 14, you can get medical care like birth control, STI tests, and abortions without your parents finding out. It’s confidential and you don’t need their permission!” the curriculum explains.

The AISD had to scrap its previous sex ed plan because it had been formed in conjunction with abortion providers, which was made illegal by the state legislature in 2018. They decided to instead consult with LGBT-rights groups to evade the ban. Planned Parenthood is very pleased at the results.

“On behalf of Planned Parenthood and our review of these lessons, they are LGBTQ inclusive and comprehensive and we support all your efforts in leadership tonight,” said Sarah Wheat, chief external affairs officer for Planned Parenthood in Texas.

Concerned parent Jennifer Fleck explained what will be taught to 11-year-old children because of this shocking new curriculum:

How to put on and take off a male condom. Carefully open and remove condom from wrapper. Place condom on the head of the erect, hard penis. If uncircumcised, pull back the foreskin first. Pinch air out of the tip of the condom. Unroll condom all the way down the penis. After sex, before pulling out, hold the condom at the base, then pull out while holding the condom in place. That is accompanied by a picture of a male and a female straddling each other. For eleven year olds!

Just last month, a sex offender and drag queen was brought into an elementary school in Austin to speak to children:

Nation's Largest Teachers Union Votes To Officially Promote Child Sex Changes

COMMENTARY AND PERSONAL REMARKS

By Lyle J. Rapacki, Ph.D.

The push to influence children (5yoa - 12yoa) is intensifying and morphing into varied methods to achieve goals the WOKE and LBGQT servants want. Parents be damned! Morality and family unit integrity be damned! The educational setting is no longer concerned preparing students to become critical thinkers; to learn and appreciate the rich history of our exceptional nation, and to become responsible members of society. The educational setting has become a psychological and emotional mine field, dangerously traveled and fraught with immense pressure to adhere to the authoritarians running the system. Once again...parents be damned. The educational system, teachers and school boards are dictating.

School Boards in each community were "hired" most likely through election by the citizens in the community. For school boards to intentionally and arrogantly ignore the very people who placed them in such positions of responsibility is atrocious, and then some! There are four branches of government in our Republic. Executive, Legislative, Judicial and WE THE PEOPLE. Yes...rarely taught anymore, but WE THE PEOPLE are a significant branch. Of course we elect representatives, but the very name shouts their role - to represent WE THE PEOPLE! It is a contract, and those of us who elected (hired) these representatives have every right to watch closely how they serve and represent us. This includes school boards.

We elected school board members to represent us, to watch over our children, to assume the fiduciary responsibility of providing the children a safe environment to learn, to challenge their minds appropriately with academics not political and psychological mind alterations. To do NO harm historically has been the given on campuses. To nefariously breach the innocence of a child under your care is abhordant! Be gone school board members, each of you who knowingly has violated the trust placed on your shoulders. And to encourage the radical socialist teachers union to promote child sex change, amoral behaviors and beliefs, psychological concepts far above the ability of children to grasp, or need to, is all the more reason you need to be gone, and even criminally charged with child abuse - at least a civil action filed against you individually.

Moms... Dads... STAND UP! The emotional and psychological well-being of your child is being assaulted in very sophisticated ways and through multiple methods. STAND UP...run into this battle. Don't worry about who will be running with you, begin yourself, now! Others will come along. Assertively go after teachers, administrators, school board members who intentionally are altering your child's morals and mores and the integrity of the family unit.

Schools Are Now Allowing Children To Identify As Cats, Horses And Dinosaurs

By Michael

Snyder/End of the American Dream June 22, 2023

I seriously should have thought of this when I was a kid. If I could have answered every question a teacher asked by meowing like a cat or roaring like a dinosaur, there is no way they could have ever accused me of getting an answer wrong. And when it was time for a quiz or a test, I could have just responded to every question with a paw print.

Of course nobody would have actually been able to get away with such a thing decades ago. When I was a kid, anyone that tried to pull this kind of a stunt would have been immediately marched down to the principal's office. But now we live at a time when we are supposed to allow people to identify as anything that they want.

Things have gotten particularly absurd in the United Kingdom. According to an investigation that was conducted by the Telegraph, schools in the UK are now allowing children to identify as all sorts of things...

At a state secondary school in Wales, one student is said to 'meow' when asked questions by a teacher, rather than answering in English, the Telegraph reports.

In other schools, one apparently insists on being addressed as a dinosaur, one claims to identify as a horse while another is said to wear a cape and demands to be acknowledged as a moon.

In the old days, teachers knew how to deal with this kind of nonsense.

But today they are instructed not to correct the children because that would be "discriminatory"...

Pupils claim teachers are 'not allowed to get annoyed' about such behavior in case it is seen as being discriminatory.

However, lessons are reportedly becoming completely derailed by these interactions, impacting the quality of their classmates' education.

So these teachers in the UK literally have to sit there and make the best of it when students respond to their questions with "animal noises"...

In some reported instances, classes have faced severe disruption as pupils insist on answering teacher's questions and communicating via animal noises.

I couldn't take that.

If I was told that I had to allow students to make animal noises all day, I would just quit.

Apparently one student that identifies as "a cat" has been doing this for three years...

In a particularly disruptive case, the newspaper spoke to a student in Wales who claimed a classmate had identified as a cat for three years.

The pupil complained: "When they answer questions, they meow rather than answer a question in English.

Are you kidding me?

In the old days, that kid would have been corrected on day one.

But these days you are not allowed to say anything.

In fact, a 13-year-old girl was recently called "despicable" by her teacher when she confronted a classmate that identifies as "a cat"...

A 13-year-old student girl and her friend were called "despicable" on Friday after questioning a fellow student's identification as a cat, according to the Daily Telegraph.

The young girl asked her fellow student, "How can you identify as a cat when you're a girl?" which resulted in her being reprimanded by her teacher at Rye College in East Sussex, according to the Daily Telegraph. The teacher told the young students they would not be allowed back at the school and would be reported to senior leadership if they continued to question their fellow student's identification.

A recording of the heated exchange was taken by some pupils involved in the incident, according to the Daily Telegraph. The recording details the exchange in which students can be heard questioning the validity of their fellow student's identification. "If they want to identify as a cat or something then they are genuinely unwell - crazy," one of the students can be heard saying. The teacher then asks the two girls, "where did you get this idea from that there are only two genders?"

The teacher then added, "gender is not linked to the parts that you were born with, gender is about how you identify." The young girls responded to this that they don't agree and that if you're a boy, you have a penis, and if you're a girl, you have a vagina.

"You are talking about the fact that cisgender is the norm, that you identify with the sexual organ you were born with, that's basically what you're saying, which is really despicable," the teacher told the students. She then insinuated that they were homophobic and warned they would be expelled from the school with thinking like this.

The parents of the student who took the recording expressed anger online about the teacher shutting down debate, according to the Daily Telegraph.

Here in the United States, we are moving very rapidly in the same direction.

In fact, we just learned that public school teachers in New York are now being instructed to keep "children's gender transitions a secret from parents in some cases"...

The New York State Education Department (NYSED) released 42 pages of new guidance for public schools Monday that includes a section about keeping children's gender transitions a secret from parents in some cases.

The report, titled "Creating a Safe, Supportive, and Affirming School Environment for Transgender and Gender Expansive Students," maintains that a student's gender identity should be based on the student's own assertion and that administrators should keep such information from families if they deem it necessary.

Can you believe that?

How do you think parents that have been purposely deceived by teachers will react once they find out the truth?

The stage is being set for some very messy lawsuits.

As a society, we have lost all common sense.

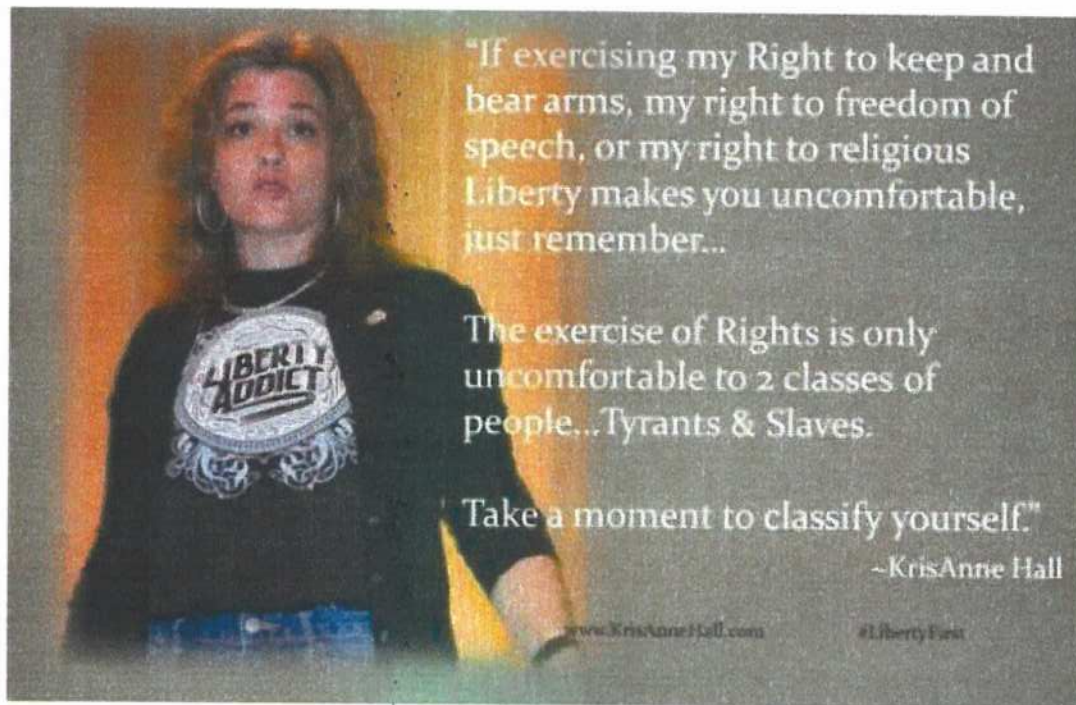

If I say that I am a chicken, that does not make me a chicken.

But now we are teaching our children that they can "identify" as anything that they want.

When I say that time is short, I am not exaggerating one bit.

The social cohesiveness of our society is literally coming apart at the seams all around us.

The inmates are running the asylum at this point, and we are raising an entire generation of children that are going to be completely and totally messed up if they ever get the opportunity to become adults.

Veteran biology professor who teaches scientific fact that sex is determined by chromosomes X and Y is FIRED after four students walked out of his reproductive class - accusing him of 'religious preaching'

By Kamal Sultan For Dailymail.Com

A veteran biology professor in Texas who has been teaching that sex is determined by X and Y chromosomes for over 20 years was allegedly fired after four students walked out of his classroom.

Dr. Johnson Varkey has claimed he was let go from his teaching position at St. Philip's College in San Antonio after he was accused of 'religious preaching'.

He was discussing the human reproductive system on November 28, 2022, when four students stormed out of the lecture.

Varkey was then accused of 'discriminatory comments about homosexuals and transgender individuals, anti-abortion rhetoric, and misogynistic banter'.

The professor said he received an email from the Alamo Colleges District Human Resources department in January, which said his credentials would be revoked pending an investigation. He was later fired.

Veteran biology professor Dr. Johnson Varkey, who has been teaching that sex is determined by X and Y chromosomes for over 20 years, was allegedly fired after four students walked out of classroom

He has claimed he was let go from his teaching position at St. Philip's College in San Antonio, Texas after he was accused of 'religious preaching'

Lawyers from the First Liberty Institute representing Varkey sent a letter to St. Philip's College last week to demand he be reinstated.

'In January 2023, St. Philip's College fired Dr. Varkey for teaching human biology just as he did in his previous twenty-year career as a professor,' it read.

'His statements are not only supported by his extensive education and experience, but they also reflect his sincerely held religious beliefs.'

The law firm argued the firing of Varkey, who taught Human Anatomy and Physiology at the college for 22 years, was against federal and state law and it targeted his First Amendment rights.

Varkey is also an associate pastor at a local church and a devout Christian who follows the religion's teachings on sexuality and abortion.

But his attorney's added he has not expressed any of those beliefs in the classroom.

'As his stellar performance reviews suggest, Dr. Varkey gladly taught students of all beliefs and backgrounds,' the letter continued.

'Throughout his employment, he never discussed with any student his personal views — religious or otherwise — on human gender or sexuality.'

In January, Varkey was informed that he was not scheduled to teach in the spring and that he wouldn't have any further teaching opportunities at St. Philip's College

'On November 28, 2022, four of Dr. Varkey's students walked out of his class when he stated, consistent with his study of human biology and his religious beliefs, that sex was determined by chromosomes X and Y.'

The lawyers argued Varkey taught from school-approved and science-based curriculum, but the college claimed his teaching was religious.

'While some of the subject matter may be connected to class content, it was very clear, from the complaints, that you pushed beyond the bounds of academic freedom with your personal opinions that were offensive to many individuals in the classroom,' school officials told him in a letter.

Varkey was informed that he was not scheduled to teach in the spring and that he wouldn't have any further teaching opportunities at St. Philip's College.

St. Philip's has not responded to the letter publicly.

The community college has received complaints from conservative-leaning professors before with political science professor Will Moravits claiming last month that his contract was terminated because of his beliefs due to student complaints.

A lawyer representing Moravits said he tried to get them 'to engage all sides of controversial issues, such as police brutality and gender ideology. Many of his engagements with students in class discussions came in direct response to their questions.'

Florida 5th Grade Teacher: Parental Rights 'Are Gone When Your Child Is in the Public School System'

JEFF POOR

A Hernando County, FL parent is upset about a Winding Waters K-8 school fifth-grade teacher showing her students a pro-LGBTQ Disney movie.

The parent, Shannon Rodriguez, protested fifth-grade teacher Jenna Barbee's decision during a local school board meeting.

"It is not a teacher's job to impose their beliefs upon a child, religious, sexual orientation, gender identity, any of the above," Rodriguez said. "But allowing movies such as this assist teachers in opening a door — and please hear me — they assist teachers in opening a door for conversations that have no place in our classrooms."

Barbee begged to differ. During an appearance on "CNN This Morning," the fifth-grade teacher argued parents were stripped of their rights when the child entered a public school system.

"We had played that for the viewers in the introduction, but I just want to give you a chance to respond," host Poppy Harlow said.

"Yes, so, that's — what she's missing and what these parents are missing is, they're not in the school system. That just shows me that she's ignorant and has not come and volunteered at all because our — these conversations, these doors, they're open. These students have one-to-one devices. The amount of things that they're able to pull up that we have to shut down, they — they — these conversations, these doors that she's talking about, that's telling you I'm stripping her rights as a parent, those rights are gone when your child is in the public school system because there are students talking about these things. It's where they get 90 percent of their socialization for the day. And we can't shut down every conversation every child has."

Pastor Forcibly Removed From School Board Meeting For Reading Aloud Porn Book From Kids' Library

However, new Florida law now means that preventing parents reading from the books results in instant removal of the materials from schools

Steve Watson

A pastor in Florida was forcibly removed from a school board meeting when he attempted to read aloud pornographic passages from a book that was available to children.

The man was one of around 30 parents at the Monday meeting at the Indian River County School Board.

Pastor John K. Amanchukwu Sr. began to read from the book titled 13 Reasons Why by Jay Asher, but he only got one sentence in before the board shut him down.

"As if letting him finger me was going to cure all my problems," the pastor read, prompting one board member to yell into the microphone "Sir, I'll stop you there."

Amanchukwu's mic was then cut off and security was called as he attempted to continue to read.

As Fox News reports, other parents at the meeting were also cut off when reading from different books, all available to school children.

However, Governor Ron DeSantis instituted a rule earlier in the year that states parents "shall have the right to read passages from any material that is subject to an objection."

The rule also decrees that if parents are prevented from doing so then the materials they are objecting to must be immediately removed and discontinued from use in the school.

Indian River County School Board member Jacqueline Rosario told Fox News that she was the only member to vote to remove the books last year and that until the new rule was instantiated, other board members ignored laws on pornographic, obscene, or sexually explicit content and continued to make the books available in school libraries.

"The difference now is, HB 1069 has allowed parents to read explicit books at board meetings. And if they get shut down, then the book is immediately removed. This is a good thing," Rosario noted.

"It is the litmus test for acceptable age appropriate and standards driven library books. If you can't read them at a board meeting, then you can't have them in our schools. All that is needed now is for a "passage" to be read and the book can be removed immediately," she continued.

Rosario added that "The superintendent and board members refused to acknowledge the gross content made available to kids until now. Finally, they don't have a choice. It's about time the truth be made known. Explicit, sexually graphic, pornographic, and obscene material does not belong in any school."

California School to Pay Mother $100,000 For Trying to Transition Daughter Behind Her Back

Jessia Konen filed the lawsuit last year, alleging that Spreckels Union School District staff manipulated her daughter into identifying as transgender.

School personnel recruited her daughter, Alicia, into an "Equality Club" where the middle-school girl was taught about bisexuality, transgender identities, and other concepts in only the sixth grade, according to a statement from The Center for American Liberty (CAL), who represented the mother in the lawsuit.

School staff gave 11-year-old Alicia articles on how to conceal her identity as a boy from her mother. They also gave her a "Gender Support Plan" that required staff to refer to her by a male name and pronouns while allowing her to use the unisex teachers' restroom.

Months later, "the school eventually told Konen it had socially transitioned Alicia behind her back and demanded Konen refer to her daughter by a male name and male pronouns," the statement said.

"This is a huge win for Jessica and Alicia, and it's also a win for parents across the country. Increasingly, schools are pushing radical gender ideology on young students and socially transitioning vulnerable children—without parental notification or consent," CAL said in a statement announcing the settlement.

"Parents have a fundamental right to direct the upbringing of their children," the statement added. "Parental Secrecy policies, as employed by the Spreckels Union School District and by schools across the country, unconstitutionally rob parents of that right."

The settlement announcement came just one day after California Attorney General Rob Bonta sued the Chino Valley Unified School District over a policy requiring schools to notify parents if their children change their gender identity or pronouns.

Bonta argued that such policies forcibly "out" transgender students and that schools are the only safe haven for some.

Backlash to Bonta's lawsuit was immediate, with many questioning why school officials are working to drive a wedge between parents and their children.

"Why are you authoritarians fighting so hard to keep sexual secrets about children from their own parents," Cory DeAngelis, Executive Director of the Educational Freedom Institute, wrote in a post on social media platform on X.

Virginia Mom Sues Pro-Transgender Teachers for Pushing Her Child into Prostitution

A Virginia mother is suing her local school district for pushing her daughter into transgenderism, prostitution, and sex trafficking.

Michelle Blair, the mother of then-14-year-old Sage Blair, filed a lawsuit against the Appomattox County School Board, district employees, and Baltimore-area public defender Aneesa Khan, according to a report by the Washington Examiner.

The mother alleged that school district employees secretly transitioned her daughter, who was later placed by the public defender in an all-male juvenile facility, where Sage was sexually assaulted and later kidnapped, raped, and sex-trafficked after she ran away from the facility.

"They stole my right to protect my daughter," Blair told the outlet. "I'm the parent, I am an expert on my child, there is nobody in the school or court system that knows my daughter better than me. They will never know my daughter better than I do."

Blair said she had no idea that her daughter was identifying as male at school, because administrators made sure to keep that a secret from her.

The mother added that Sage was bullied, which involved "verbal, physical, sexually harassed with constant threats of rape by the male classmates," and that despite all of this, "the school encouraged her to use the boys' bathroom."

Blair had reportedly informed the school that her daughter had a history of mental health issues, including depression, eating disorders, self-harm, and hallucinations.

Nonetheless, the school decided to socially transition the young girl without her parents' knowledge, the lawsuit, filed by the Child & Parent Rights Campaign (CPRC) on behalf of Blair, said.

The school's decision to conceal information "deprived" Sage's mother of being able to "exercise her fundamental parental rights to direct the upbringing of her daughter, including making educational and mental health decisions," the CPRC said.

"The school officials were encouraging her to use the boys' bathroom, even though they knew she was being threatened with sexual assault, so she perceived herself that she wasn't safe and she runs away from home," CPRC attorney Vernadette Broyles told the Washington Examiner.

"She runs into the arms of a waiting pedophile, who encounters her, rapes her, traffics her with two other men, and takes her across state lines into Washington, D.C., and then ultimately into Maryland," Broyles added.

Broyles went on to say that the "nightmare should have ended" in Maryland, when Sage was eventually rescued by FBI agents, but the Baltimore juvenile court system took custody of Sage at the behest of Khan.

Khan ended up deciding that the Blairs were not "sufficiently affirming" of her new identity, and "concocts a fabricated story of abuse and neglect by the parents and convinces a judge to keep this child in custody," Broyles said.

Sage was then placed into a juvenile facility for adolescent males "where she was again sexually assaulted, exposed to drugs, and denied medical and mental health care," the lawsuit states.

Meanwhile, Natasha M. Dartigue, Maryland's top public defender, told the Washington Examiner, "We fully support our attorney, who appropriately represented her client in accordance with her legal, ethical, and professional obligations."

Blair's daughter then reportedly ran away from the facility, only to later be found by another pedophile who brought her to Texas "where she was again raped, drugged, starved, and tortured until law enforcement in Texas rescued her and notified her mother who returned her to Virginia," the lawsuit states.

Since then, Sage has been diagnosed with complex PTSD, and has “undergone intensive in-patient and outpatient therapy to address the multiple incidents of extreme trauma caused by Defendants’ acts and omissions.”

Virginia Gov. Glenn Youngkin (R) has been tackling this facilitation of grooming by making schools adopt policies that require parents to provide written consent for their child to go by another name at school and be addressed with other pronouns. Under these policies, parents will also have to grant consent for their child to receive counseling services “pertaining to gender,” among other things.

But some Virginia school divisions appear to be entering a faceoff with the state and parents’ groups over Youngkin’s model policies, making the prevention of grooming all the more difficult.

“Sage’s tragic story demonstrates the importance of parental involvement,” Youngkin spokeswoman Macaulay Porter told the Washington Examiner. “For Sage and students, parents and teachers across the Commonwealth, the governor will continue to empower parents and ensure the privacy, dignity, and respect of all students with the model policies.”

Los Angeles Schools Host LGBT 'Rainbow Club' for Kids as Young as 5

The Los Angeles Unified School District is hosting a “Rainbow Club,” to teach kids as young as five years old about LGBT-related topics.

“Rainbow Clubs are inclusive spaces for elementary students to explore LGBTQ+ related topics,” the Los Angeles Unified School District explains in the description of its so-called “Rainbow Club.”

Elsewhere in the description, Los Angeles Unified School District explains that the Rainbow Club “is a space for celebrating many types of identities, including Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Nonbinary, Queer, Questioning, Intersex, Ace and Two Spirit identities!”

“Not sure what all of those words even mean?! Not sure if they apply to you? No worries! Everyone is welcome and there will be plenty of time to ask questions,” the description adds.

A few of the “activities” taking place in the Rainbow Club are called “Identity Maps,” and “Love is Love.”

During the “Love is Love” activity, the children will be asked questions like “Had you seen this or other other movies with LGBTQ+ characters?,” “Do you think it’s important to have queer/trans characters in a movie or TV show?” and “Have you seen characters who share an aspect of your identity before?”

Ironically, the Los Angeles school district is hosting its “Rainbow Club” for elementary school students while many on the left insist they are not trying to groom children.

As academia, the entertainment industry, mainstream media, and celebrities continue to hype transgenderism, more young people than ever are beginning to doubt their biological sex.

In 2021, research published by the Trevor Project found that over one in four — 26 percent — of LGBTQIAAP2S+ youth identify as nonbinary. An additional 20 percent said they are not sure or are questioning whether they identify as nonbinary.

A recent study also strongly suggests that social contagion is a factor in teenagers and young adults identifying as transgender.

‘Completely Inappropriate’: Oklahoma Elementary School

A superintendent of an Oklahoma school district is calling for the immediate termination of a recently hired elementary school principal who performs as a drag queen and has faced child pornography charges in the past.

Dr. Shane Murnan, 52 — who performs as Shantel Mandalay at a venue called the Boom, hosting Thirsty Thursday and Sunday Night Karaoke, and who participates in drag queen story hour with children — was named the new principal of John Glenn Elementary, Fox News Digital reported.

Ryan Walters, the school district's superintendent, said this is a move to indoctrinate children with harmful Marxist ideology and a way to pit children against their parents.

"I hear from parents every day that are concerned with this woke left-wing indoctrination of schools, this gender theory that continues to be thrust upon our kids," Walters told Fox News Digital. "It's completely inappropriate."

The child pornography charge brought against Murnan was dropped more than 20 years ago during a preliminary hearing when it could not be confirmed if the photos on his electronic devices depicted minors, Fox News Digital reported. Western Heights Public Schools acknowledges Murnan's past charges but praises him for his "outstanding reputation" in the education field.

"He holds a Bachelor of Science in Elementary Education, a Masters of Education in Educational Administration, and a Doctorate of Education in Educational Leadership and Administration," the statement from the school district reads. "We welcome Dr. Murnan to Western Heights, and we are very excited about his vision for John Glenn and the community." In the world of drag queen performance, Murnan boasts the titles of Miss Gay Oklahoma America and Miss Gay Oklahoma USA. In June, Murnan did a story hour at the Metropolitan Library System.

"No parent wants to send their kids to school knowing that they could be exposed to this radical gender theory in any capacity," Walters told Fox News Digital. "This woke war on our kids has to stop. We will not allow it in Oklahoma. This is the liberal insanity that every parent wants out of the classroom."

This is not the first instance of drag queens infiltrating schools. In New Jersey, a drag queen performer, who also happens to be a school board member, called the passage of laws restricting drag queen performances for children a "disservice to young minds," Breitbart News reported. More than 12 states have laws restricting public drag queen performances.

Considering the unprecedented indoctrination flooding schools by the commies in control of the education system, it will be a miracle if this generation's students graduate unscathed by the leftist propaganda.

My responsibility is to my children and my family. The public school system cannot be saved. Even if it could, I am not sending my kids in to help with that mission. Not their job. They are not equipped. No child is. I hear parents say that they won't leave the school system because they want to fight. But it's not you doing the fighting. It's your child. And he cannot win it. You are sending him on a suicide mission. It isn't fair to him. The school system is undefeated. It changes children, children do not change it. But yes, keep feeding your kids into the meat grinder. Maybe it will be different this time. You know it won't be, but you tell yourself that. Save your own. Get them out. Let the system collapse and die.

Maybe it's just me, but that jewelry hanging out of your nose is about as attractive as a booger.

‘Gender-bending’ elementary school teacher couple busted in prostitution sting

- by: Greg Hoyt All public schools will destroy your child! trash like below are openly welcomed.

CHATTANOOGA, TN – A couple of elementary school substitute teachers who worked in the Hamilton County Schools district, who also happen to be some kind of a romantic couple, were apparently hemmed up in a prostitution sting this past August.

Of particular note regarding the incident, which local reports omitted, is that aside from the alleged prostitution in which the couple engaged regularly, the pair also happen embody and promote a ‘queer’ lifestyle

In late August, authorities in Chattanooga cited 22-year-old Ezra Fry and 25-year-old David Acevedo for prostitution, amid a handful of other charges, following an undercover sting where an officer posed as a “john” and connected with Fry through “an illicit prostitution website” where an unlawful encounter was arranged.

Fry allegedly told the officer prior to the meet-up a variety of things Fry would and would not do during the encounter, as well as informing the officer that the rate was $150 and to meet him at his home “because my husband is here,” and Fry felt safer in that Fry assumed the undercover officer was merely a new/unfamiliar client.

However, things did not go according to plan from the perspective of the two suspects accused of being in the hooking business, as the presumed new client brought along a handful of other officers and detained both Fry and Acevedo at their residence located off of Orchard Knob Avenue.

According to the report from the incident, officers on scene discovered “a large amount of drug paraphernalia,” as well as an unlawfully possessed .22 caliber revolver. Both Fry and Acevedo were subsequently given misdemeanor citations for unlawful drug paraphernalia, prostitution or promoting prostitution, unlawful possession of a firearm, and simple possession.

Per the incident report, both Fry and Acevedo told officers they’d been prostituting for years, claiming that they “have to do this or they will starve.” The suspects also told police where they respectively worked during the ordeal, with the two saying they were special education teachers at Woodmore Elementary and Calvin Donaldson Elementary.

Hamilton County Schools did confirm that Fry and Acevedo had worked for various schools via a substitute teacher staffing company, but spokesman Steve Doremus added that it was his understanding that neither of the two have done any substitute work within the county since late August.

Local reporting on the arrest managed to omit details regarding Fry and Acevedo’s other intriguing element of their respective lifestyles, namely the gender-bending portion.

Nor did local reports highlight the controversy Fry was involved in this past April when accusations surfaced accusing Fry of being a biological male and forcing elementary-aged students to refer to him as “Mrs. Fry”. Fry was subsequently asked to not return to the elementary school following the April incident.

School district hires principal who moonlights as drag queen, was previously arrested for child pornography

• by: Jenna Curren

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK – The newest elementary school principal within Oklahoma’s Western Heights public school district reportedly moonlights as a drag queen and has a criminal history.

The crime for which he was previously arrested is child pornography. First reported by VISUT, Dr. Shane Brent Murnan, 52, had his personal devices confiscated by police back in 2001 on suspicion of possession of child pornography.

At the time, Murnan was a fifth grade teacher at Will Rogers Elementary School in Stillwater, Oklahoma. Two weeks after his devices were confiscated, Murnan was arrested.

At the hearing, Appeals Court Associate Judge Dave Allen said that it was “clear from a review of the pictures that they do represent child pornography.” One year later, Payne County District Judge Donald

L. Worthington dismissed the charge against Murnan.

Murnan's attorneys maintained that he obtained the pictures by "accident" and that the ages of the children in the photos could not be "proven." According to reports, due to the charges, Murnan lost his teaching job.

However, his record was expunged and the charges were dismissed after he completed probation for a drug charge in October 2003.

In 2007, Murnan became a school teacher at a rural Oklahoma school district. In 2016, he moved to an elementary school position at Oklahoma City Public Schools. From 2020-2022, Murnan worked as an assistant vice principal before now becoming a principal at John Glenn Elementary School.

For two decades, Murnan moonlighted as a drag queen named Shantel Mandalay. In a letter to parents, Brayden Savage, superintendent of Western Heights Public Schools, wrote, "I am writing to address a concern you may read about on social media. We understand the situation may cause concerns and questions among parents, staff and community members."

Savage claims that "usual hiring practices" were followed when vetting Murnan, including checking references and conducting a felony criminal background check. The letter said that a "safe learning environment" was the district's priority.

After getting his record expunged in 2003, Murnan spent the next three years launching his Shantel Mandalay persona.

Late in 2020, while Murnan was working at Prairie Queen Elementary School, the state entered a new criminal probable cause initial filing with Murnan as the defendant.

It is unknown what the crime is or what was being investigated, but the case has been assigned to Judge Kevin C. McCray.

In a social media post welcoming Murnan to the school, Western Heights school district acknowledged the charges previously brought against him, saying, "This evening, the Board of Education approved the hiring of Dr. Shane Murnan for the Head Principal position at John Glenn Elementary. Recently, the district has been made aware of previous charges that were dismissed more than 20 years ago.

"Dr. Murnan has been serving the field of education for more than 25 years and has an outstanding reputation. He comes highly recommended from previous supervisors, colleagues and educators."

Back in June 2023, The Blaze reported that the school board for the Western Heights School District in Oklahoma held a meeting to decide on who would be filling administrative positions at schools in the area.

The meeting that Murnan was selected to become the principal for a school with hundreds of young children was not made public, whereas most school board meetings are open to the public.

In January 2020, the Oklahoma Gazette, an LGBTQ publication, wrote of Mandalay, "During the day, Ms. Shantel [Mandalay] is an elementary school teacher named Shane, which he said was very tough when he first started."

Other LGBTQ-themed outlets based in Oklahoma have published stories featuring Mandalay and made references to the performer's daytime career in education.

All of these references support reports, including a report from Libs of TikTok, that Murnan is the man behind Mandalay, but none has confirmed it.

In a 2018 article entitled, "For the love of queens and kids," the Gayly implied that Mandalay's life as a "teacher" prepared the drag queen for reading stories to children. Mandalay told the publication, "I have always loved education and working with kids hoping to make a difference. Now I'm able to combine both my passion for drag and education and hopefully change a kids' life by letting them know it's okay to be whomever you would want to be."

Oregon School Declares Core Skills No Longer Necessary Because Minorities Aren't Testing Well

by Steve Watson

School officials in Oregon have decided that proficiency in reading, writing and math are no longer necessary in order to graduate, reasoning that minority children are not testing well and therefore the current standards are “discriminatory”.

Yes, really.

The Daily Mail reports that the State Board of Education there voted to suspend the need to prove standards in core skills for FIVE years because ‘equity’, or something.

The standards were put on hold during the pandemic, but no simply will not be brought back until 2027 as they have been deemed ‘harmful’ to students of color, students with disabilities and those learning English as a second language, the report notes.

Board members claims that state-mandated standardized tests will still be administered to most high school students in the State, but will not be employed to determine whether a student has the skills necessary to graduate.

“The only thing we are suspending is the inappropriate use of how those assessments were being used,” state board member Vicky López Sánchez, a dean at Portland Community College, declared during a meeting, part of which is highlighted in the video below.

Another Board Chair, Martinez Zapata described opposition to the move as a “campaign of misinformation” and “artistic quality mental acrobatics,” further claiming that the arguments against doing away with standards are rooted in “myopic analysis and bigotry,” as well as “racial superiority.”

The move has prompted a fierce backlash from parents and members of the public.

“It is not bigoted, it is not racist to want your student to be able to actually learn,” former gubernatorial candidate Christine Drazen noted, adding that “At some point ... our diploma is going to end up looking a lot more like a participation prize than an actual certificate that shows that someone actually is prepared to go pursue their best future.”

Drazen further stated that “The board failed to discuss their responsibility for lagging academic achievement in our state. Instead they cast the blame on a tool used to measure a student’s ability to read, write and do math. It’s disappointing that these unelected bureaucrats decided to ignore public comment and continue down a path that neglects their responsibility to help students meet high standards.”

Taylor Swift College Courses to Be Offered at Harvard, UC Berkeley, University of Florida Expensive Public "Fool" zones or work!

College courses on the jet-setting climate change activist pop star, who backs Democrats, Taylor Swift will reportedly be offered at Harvard University, UC Berkeley, and University of Florida this spring.

Harvard professor and “diehard Swiftie” Stephanie L. Burt will be teaching a new course called “Taylor Swift and Her World,” set to debut this spring in the Ivy League university’s English Department, according to a report by the Harvard Crimson.

“In this class, students will earn college credit for their deep dives into Swift’s lyrics, music, and influence, dissecting her catalog and reading a host of authors Burt finds relevant to understanding Swift’s artistry,” the newspaper reported.

Professor Burt, who graduated from Harvard in 1994, told the Harvard Crimson, “I try to teach only the courses that I think our students can really use — either because students want them or because our curriculum needs them.”

Burt added that she plans to explore the “Cruel Summer” singer’s shift from the country genre to pop — which coincided with her move from Nashville to Manhattan — in the context of what the professor believes is the South’s shifting relationship with the rest of the United States.

“Taylor Swift is someone who establishes complicated and changing relationships to the idea of Americanness and to the idea of white Americanness and of middle America,” Burt said.

The professor believes that such concepts are worthy of study and analysis at an Ivy League institution.

“Taylor Swift is a good way to think about what it’s like to have a lot of eyes on you and to wonder what you do with your privilege,” Burt said. “To look around and ask, ‘I’m pretty ambitious and I got to this place when I was pretty young. What do I do next? What do I do with all this attention?’”

Meanwhile, at UC Berkeley, students will be offered a for-credit course called “Artistry & Entrepreneurship: Taylor’s Version” in the spring, according to a report by Los Angeles Times.

The class will be led by UC Berkeley graduate Crystal Haryanto, who seeks to address the alleged “stereotypical critiques” of Swift, as well as the pop star’s ever-increasing popularity and influence.

“I had the most fun dreaming up the unit on personas, perceptions, and personalities,” Haryanto told Los Angeles Times. “There’s so much to unpack in terms of the relationship between Taylor as an individual and an image in the media, and how she constantly reinvents her music and style.”

Similarly, University of Florida will also be offering a course on Swift called, “Musical Storytelling With Taylor Swift and other Iconic Female Artists,” according to a report by Bloomberg.

Instructor Melina Jimenez will oversee “13 gorgeous weeks of discussing Taylor Swift’s discography, with a focus on her evergreen songwriting,” according to the course description.

Students will also “draw parallels between Swift’s enchanting lyrics and works by other famous female masterminds” while dissecting themes such as “old flames, infidelity, aging and double standards.”

This is not the first time Swift has inspired the implementation of new college courses.

Massachusetts school requests National Guard to be brought in to crackdown on students running amok: 'They're cutting class, having sex and doing drugs' Reaping what we have sown!

Committee members at a Massachusetts school have requested that the National Guard be brought in to deal with unruly students 'causing chaos'.

Violence and security concerns have been raised at Brockton High School, with 11 students arrested and criminally charged just last week after a brawl in the school.

Committee members Joyce Asack, Tony Rodrigues, Claudio Gomes and Ana Oliver requested immediate assistance last week 'to prevent a potential tragedy'.

Their letter said: 'Over the past few months, our high school has experienced a disturbing increase in incidents related to violence, security concerns, and substance abuse.

'The situation has reached a critical point, more recently we had an alarming 35 teachers absent, underscoring the severity of the challenges we are facing.'

The letter added: 'We are formally requesting that you reach out to Governor Healey and request the deployment of the National Guard to assist in restoring order, ensuring the safety of all individuals on the school premises, and implementing measures to address the root causes of the issues we are facing.'

Cellphone footage obtained by NBC Boston shows students fighting in a stairwell at the school.

Other video seen by Boston 25 shows two individuals brawling inside what appears to be a classroom.

The two students throw each other around the room, exchanging kicks and punches with each other as a crowd gathers to watch the violence unfold.

Several individuals can be seen throwing punches and attacking each other during the melee.

Earlier this month, teachers voiced their concerns during an emergency committee meeting and shared their experiences.

The Enterprise reported that teacher Eleri Merrikin told the meeting that: 'They're having sex and doing drugs and cutting class in empty classrooms.'

While Julie Fairfield added: 'I don't even like to leave my classroom anymore, I usually wait until after school to go to the bathroom.'

While secretary Cheri Mazzoli recounted being trampled by a mob of students racing down a hallway to watch a fight that had broken out.

Mazzoli said: 'We are in chaos, we need help. The crowd came down the hall so quickly that I got swept up, not by the students fighting, but by the students that were rushing to watch and video the fight.'

The school is the largest high school in the state with an enrollment of around 4,300 students.

In May of last year, two students were stabbed during a brawl that broke out just outside the school.

The altercation saw five people rushed to hospital, with another victim then being stabbed inside the hospital.

Five people were arrested in connection with the high school and hospital stabbings.

During a press conference on Monday, committee member Rodrigues said: 'We need to take our schools back in control and make sure our students have a safe learning environment cause what's going at in the high school is disheartening and kids are losing precious learning time and kids are causing chaos.'

Brockton Mayor Robert Sullivan opposes the proposal, saying: 'We need to give our administrators the tools to keep order in the school, including amending certain state rules and regulations that currently hamper these efforts

'National Guard soldiers are not the answer. We have had school police working effectively and safely at the high school for decades.'

Massachusetts Gov. Maura Healey issued a statement Sunday saying she is 'committed to ensuring that schools are safe and supportive environments.'

Healey added that she has been in touch with local officials about the concerns at Brockton High School.

Just a reminder that the concept of "gender identity" was fabricated by a Harvard educated pervert named John Money who tested his theories on two young boys, causing both to commit suicide.

Teen Surprises Crying Toddler With Act Of Kindness At Local Fair

October 6, 2023

A heartwarming story has emerged from a local fair that has left an entire community smiling.

A compassionate teenager's act of goodwill towards a distraught toddler not only comforted the child but also led to a heartwarming reunion between two families.

Ashley Wargel, a mother of two, had an unexpected turn of events during her night out at the West Side Nut Club Fall Festival in Evansville, Indiana. Her three-year-old son, Maddox, threw a tantrum amidst the overwhelming lights and crowds, causing stress for both mother and child as they attracted curious onlookers.

16-year-old Michael Bartlett noticed their plight and decided to take action. Michael, who had been hanging out with friends in a line nearby, approached Ashley and Maddox. He offered the toddler a stuffed red panda he had won at one of the carnival games.

"He walked over and said, 'I think this might make him feel better. Do you mind if I give him this stuffed animal?'" Wargel said.

Wargel, moved by his kindness, took to Facebook to find and thank him. Mutual friends recognized Michael in a photo she posted, leading to their reunion via Facetime.

Michael was taken aback by the attention, saying, "I'm speechless. I didn't think it would blow up like this."

For Ashley, this small yet heartwarming gesture served as a powerful reminder that kindness can significantly brighten one's day. Inspired by the experience, she pledged to go out of her way to spread kindness to others, paying forward the goodwill she and Maddox had received.

How A Simple Act Of Kindness Connected Two Strangers At Atlanta Airport

Today's good news story comes from Atlanta, Georgia.

In a world often divided, the story of Cindy Tutko and a kind stranger at the Atlanta airport serves as a heartwarming reminder of the power of human connection.

Cindy Tutko, a resident of Florida, found herself facing a daunting challenge during her journey home from Baton Rouge. A torn ACL had left her mobility compromised, and with the train services at the Atlanta airport temporarily unavailable, she was confronted with the arduous task of reaching her gate on time.

It was at this critical juncture that Michael Wright, hailing from LaFayette, entered the scene. Witnessing Tutko's determined yet limping progress, Wright's innate kindness took center stage. Without a moment's hesitation, he offered to shoulder the burden of her heavy bag, a gesture that would soon become the catalyst for an hour-long display of selfless assistance.

Wright not only carried Tutko's belongings but also provided unwavering support as they navigated the bustling airport together. His empathetic spirit shone brightly, turning a potentially stressful situation into a shared journey marked by camaraderie and understanding.

The act of kindness didn't end there. As Tutko faced the challenge of boarding the plane with her injury, Wright continued to stand by her side. His genuine concern and helpful gestures ensured that Tutko was not only able to make it to her gate but also board the plane early, alleviating the physical strain she might have otherwise endured.

It's SPRING CLEANING TIME!

March is here and typically most of us get into spring cleaning our homes. But what about OUR BODIES??

"Take care of your body! It's the only home you have to live in!!" - J.M.

SUPERIOR LIVER LOVER (back in stock)- NOW ONLY $15!!

Your liver is one of the largest organs in your body. It helps remove waste and handles various nutrients and medicines. Most of us should be detoxifying the liver multiple times per year! This Liver Detox not only promotes weight loss and liver health, but improves blood sugar levels and removes toxins from the body, but it also feeds and nourishes the cells and soft tissue in the liver allowing it to function at a more optimum level. Your liver is constantly working as it has hundreds of jobs, including filtering toxins from your bloodstream, balancing macro- and micronutrients, and regulating hormones. Most of the time, you don't even know it's working at all. Even when it stops functioning properly, you might not notice anything out of the ordinary. But liver conditions that go unnoticed can progress to liver failure, a life-threatening condition.

SUPERIOR BLOOD WASH EXTRACT-NOW ONLY $20!!

Made from; Organic red clover blossom, organic burdock root, organic buckthorn bark, organic licorice root, organic goldenseal root, sarsaparilla root, chaparral leaf, oregon grape root, water & organic alcohol, this product, simply put, purifies and cleans your blood. Because blood carries oxygen and nutrition to your body's cell and removes waste and other pollutants, cleansing your blood is a good way to naturally clear out toxins from the body and maintain optimum health. Imagine driving your car without an air filter too long or worse yet, one that is caked with gunk! Riding the body of toxins in the blood is vital to a smoother running body.

SUPERIOR MULLEIN LEAF TINCTURE-NOW ONLY $15!!

Mullein is a supreme, safe, and profound respiratory tonic. It helps open the lungs, eases spasms, tightness, and cough, and soothes irritation and dryness AND IT has been used traditionally as a remedy for the respiratory tract, including bronchitis. It works as an expectorant, meaning it helps expel mucus. Expectorant herbs help loosen bronchial secretions and make elimination of mucus easier, therefore bringing up and out many particles and toxins that have taken up residence in the lung tissue. This is a MUST HAVE for those who have smoked, was around second hand smoke, worked in a toxin industry (nail salon, military locations, mechanic shops, etc). Plant compounds in mullein are known to have antitussive (cough-reducing) and expectorant (mucus-thinning) properties and it also contains ursolic acid, a substance that some researchers believe could be used to prevent and treat COVID-19 infection!!!

The advertised prices are valid through midnight MST on March 31 2024. Prices subject to change based on availability without notice. Reply to this email with any questions or call (406) 274-7579

Taheebo Tea Club

22545 Hatteras St., Woodland Hills, CA 91367 USA

www.taheeboteaclub.com (818) 610-8088 Health@taheeboteaclub.com

Taheebo Tea Club's Original Pure Pau D'Arco Taheebo Tea comes from the only tree in the world that fungus does not grow on. As a result, it naturally has anti-fungal, anti-infection, anti-viral, anti-bacterial, and anti-parasite properties. These benefits go a long way to helping our immune system contend with a lot of things it has to on a daily basis. Parasites would be something like Lyme disease or tapeworms, bacteria would be something like strep throat or pneumonia, viral would be something like herpes, HIV, or the coronavirus, infection would be any infection from a tooth infection to a bladder infection, and fungal would be something like toe nail fungus, yeast, or candida.

But, maybe more importantly, what our tea does is build the red corpuscles in the blood which carry oxygen to our organs and cells. Our organs and cells need oxygen to regenerate, our immune system needs oxygen to develop, and cancer happens to die in oxygen. So, the tea is great for healthy people because what it does is regenerate new cells. Everything from the cells in our skin so we look better, to the cells in our organs so they function properly, and, it can truly be miraculous for someone fighting a potentially life threatening disease due to an infection, diabetes, or cancer.

All of our packaging is in 1 pound packages. A 1 pound package of tea makes 300 eight ounce cups. Since our tea has no caffeine, it can be drank all day, all night. All orders ship immediately the same day, and shipping within the US is free.
